Roosevelt To Submit Vast National Health Plan

Five-Point Program To Cost $50,000,000; Security Extension Also Scheduled

President Roosevelt will submit to Congress at the coming session a social welfare program including not only proposals for enlarging the social security, old-age benefit system but also an extensive national health plan. It is indicated the two phases of the program will be submitted separately.

Miss Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's committee to coordinate health and welfare activities and former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, announced, following a call at the White House, that the President would transmit the committee's report to Congress with a special message.

Recommendations of the Social Security Board for extending and strengthening the security act will be submitted to Congress with another special message, it was disclosed at the White House. The message, it is forecast, will urge adoption of the board's recommendations.

To Follow Council's Plan

The board's proposals are expected to follow closely recommendations of the Social Security Advisory Council, recently made public. The council asked that old-age benefits be extended to include millions of workers and others now outside their scope, including Government workers.

Other recommendations included old-age benefits to wives, widows and dependent children of participants in the plan, the start of annuity benefits on January 1, 1940, instead of January 1, 1942, as now provided, and contribution by the Federal Government of one-third of the cost of the system.

The health committee's report will recommend that legislation be enacted to put into effect the most urgent essentials of the program presented to the National Health Conference here last July.

50 Millions First Year

This program consists of five main recommendations—extension of public health activities such as are now carried on by the National Health Institute, and enlarged maternity and child health services; a Nation-wide hospital construction program; medical aid to indigent persons; a health insurance program as an alternative to these things, and health disability benefits.

Inclusion of Government workers in the social security old-age system, it was learned, would not affect the retirement compensation of workers who for years have built up credits under the Government's retirement plan. They would not lose by the change. At the same time, under the social security plan, they would not lose their retirement compensation credits by shifting from Government to private employment.

The health committee's report, Miss Roche said, contemplates a $50,000,000 to $65,000,000 program

Roper Shakes Hand Of Each of 900 at Standards Bureau

Four seconds per handshake was the record set by Secretary Roper yesterday at a farewell reception given him by 900 employes of the Bureau of Standards.

The Secretary and Mrs. Roper, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. J. M. Johnson, the Director of the Bureau and Mrs. L. J. Briggs, and Assistant Directors E. G. Crittenden and A. S. McAllister and their wives stood in the receiving line and shook hands with all of the bureau employes in one hour flat. That meant an average of 15 handshakes a minute.

The Commerce Department reception will be held for Secretary and Mrs. Roper Thursday, but the bureau held its party yesterday so the throng of employes would not have to use Uncle Sam's time in making the trip from the bureau's offices, at Connecticut avenue and Upton street, downtown to the main Commerce Building.

100 Houses Wrecked By Turkish Quakes

Ankara, Turkey, Dec. 19 (AP).—Sporadic earth shocks in the Kirshehir area of Central Anatolia continued today, terrorizing residents. No casualties were reported.

The tremors began Saturday and by yesterday had wrecked more than 100 homes and had left at least 600 persons homeless.

Offer of Guns to Mexico Revealed As U. S. Links 'Big Names' to Coster

Consul Says Agents Of Drug Swindler Had Rifles to Sell

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 19.—Soon after a McKesson & Robbins drug firm official from Boston, testifying here today, said the concern's late president, Philip Musica, alias F. Donald Coster, had contemplated a mammoth deal in rifles and ammunition, the Mexican consul in Boston made startling revelations there substantiating the testimony.

These two events, together with other of the day's happenings, caused Brien McMahon, Assistant United States Attorney General, who came here from Washington to co-ordinate the work of the Federal agencies in the case, to predict the indictment of persons of "great prominence." McMahon added:

"This case has more widespread ramifications than any other fraud case in my memory."

Simultaneously, the New York County grand jury indicted, on charges of grand larceny and forgery, the three surviving Musica brothers, already indicted by a Federal grand jury. District Attorney Dewey said his accountants had discovered that the brothers, including the deceased, had taken nearly $4,000,000 from the drug concern.

The Mexican consul, Alfred R Shrigley, disclosed two Boston men approached him in November, 1937, and offered to sell the Mexican government "any amount" of rifles and ammunition.

The consul, who gave the names of the men to Acting United States Attorney John A. Canavan, said "they told me the munitions were stored in Connecticut and New York."

The Mexican government, Shrigley asserted, was "not interested" in the proposition.

"I was told that any number of Lee-Enfield rifles of 1917 model were available to be sold anywhere," the consul said. "When I asked them if 40,000 or 50,000 were available, the men answered 'yes and more.'"

The price, he said, was "less than $3 a rifle."

Assistant Attorney General McMahon was accompanied here by W. K. Hopkins, chief of the trial section, and Thomas Dodd, special assistant, both connected with the criminal division of the office of the United States Attorney General.

Attending the conference with them in the Federal Building were John Q. Walter, of the narcotics division, Connecticut; United States Marshal Bernard Fitch, of Connecticut; Lester C. Dunigan, chief of the criminal division of the United States attorney's office in New York; Gregory F. Noonan, acting United States attorney; James Caffrey, of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Arthur Gorman, assistant United States attorney of Connecticut; Ralph Piccolo, of Bridgeport, and Thomas Hurney, special deputy of the internal revenue department of Hartford.

The testimony linking Coster-Musica to gun-running plans was offered by Frederic Wingersky, of Boston, a McKesson & Robbins vice president in charge of law and labor relations. Coster-Musica, he said, ordered him to draft a contract for the purchase of 100,000 Lee-Enfield rifles and 100,000,000 rounds of cartridges.

The purchase, however, was not made so far as he knew, Wingersky said.

Wingersky testified at a hearing in the office of State Attorney General John J. Bennet, jr. Assistant State Attorney General Ambrose V. McCall told Wingersky to report to Gregory F. Noonan, acting U. S.

U. S., Despite Protest, Aids China Again

Dollar Credits Given For Gold Deposits As Japan Deplores 'Regrettable Act'

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday announced, in the face of Japanese protests, a further arrangement with the Chinese government whereby financial aid will be extended to enable China to purchase needed supplies in the defense against Japanese invasion.

At the same time, he announced that the Treasury's "door will be open" to discuss a possible Government loan with representatives of Japan "or any other friendly nation."

The new financial aid to China, which follows on the heels of a $25,000,000 loan by the Export-Import Bank, will be in the form of an extension of dollar credits against the gold which the Bank of China has on deposit with the Treasury.

Neutrality Issue Raised

This is achieved through extension for an unstated period beyond January 1 of an arrangement with China, announced July 9, 1937, whereby dollar exchange is made available for "currency stabilization purposes" and large amounts of silver are purchased from China.

Treasury officials said the part of the standing agreement relating to silver purchases from China was not involved in the extension of the part having to do with making dollar exchange available.

Silver is purchased, officials explained, whenever the Chinese government notifies the Treasury that it has silver to sell. Large amounts, running into hundreds of millions of ounces, are known to have been purchased, although the precise figures are not available.

Purchase of silver, however, is a continuous process, depending on arrangements made relative to particular shipments, while a time limitation had been placed on the plan for making dollar exchange available to facilitate exports to China.

Time Limit Indefinite

Morgenthau was asked whether, in his opinion, the Government's policy of extending aid to China violated the spirit of the neutrality act. He replied:

"Why? Who's at war?"

The comment had obvious reference to the fact that Japan has made no formal declaration of war against China.

Treasury officials said the arrangement for making dollar exchange available had been extended once before. Morgenthau's formal announcement was that the plan had been extended for a "further period" beyond December 31.

Asked how long a period this was, he remarked:

"The way it is written I guess they don't want you to know."

Under the agreement of July, 1937, China acquired from the Treasury an unnamed amount of gold. In view of the arrangement, in the same agreement, to buy large amounts of silver from China, the whole plan

Chamberlain Asks Peace 'Sign' of Hitler

Wants to Know if Nazis Really Intend To Be Partners; Commons Defeats Vote Of Censure; Lloyd George Baits Him

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Dec. 19.—Prime Minister Chamberlain and his government won a vote of confidence in the House of Commons late tonight after a stormy debate, in which the Prime Minister extended the hand of friendship to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini, and implored Hitler to give some "sign" he really wants peace and not war.

Chamberlain spoke as his own chief counsel for the defense in reply to the Labor Party's challenging vote of censure—"that this house has no confidence in the foreign policy of His Majesty's government."

This rebuke was defeated by the usual majority, 340 to 143, thanks to the government party whips who warned back-benchers to toe the mark or forfeit official support when they come up for re-election.

Cheers from all sides attended Chamberlain's remark that Anglo-French relations remained "most cordial." As for the United States, he said, "there is no source of difficulty or difference between us which can give the slightest shade of cause for anxiety."

Early in the debate Chamberlain was angry when Laborites called him a liar. Later, however, the 69-year-old Premier smiled sardonically when taunted about his age and courage by the 75-year-old former Premier, David Lloyd George, author of that immortal ten-word biography of Chamber-

Brazil Drafts Compromise Solidarity Pact at Lima

Plan Provides for American Defense Against 'Expansion' Plans of Outsiders

By the Associated Press.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 19.—The Western Hemisphere solidarity and defense project took a big step forword today as the Brazilian delegation to the Pan-American Conference completed a compromise resolution. Leaders predicted agreement would be reached within a few days.

The delegates appeared to be near a split Saturday, with the United States favoring a pronouncement against outside aggression while the Argentine, fearful of angering European friends and of any future change in Washington's policy, wanted a resolution which merely used the word aggression.

Both Secretary of State Hull and the chief Argentine delegate, Isidoro Ruiz Moreno, seemed to be in accord today that the resolution should be stronger than the agreement reached at Buenos Aires in 1936.

Welles Takes Stand

(In Washington, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles stated the people of the United States "demand a continuation of all that is implied in the good neighbor policy."

(His comment, indorsing Sunday's address in Lima by Alf M. Landon, was believed intended to end Argentine speculation that the good neighbor policy might end with a change of party in power.)

The agreement at the Buenos Aires Inter-American Conference provided for consultation simply "in the event the peace of the American republics is menaced."

Today's Brazilian draft of the resolution, drawn up by former Foreign Minister Afranio Mello Franco, is reported to go further in that the signatories would declare themselves ready to defend the American continent against expansionist plans of other powers and express a readiness to combine immediately in common defense.

All Views Combined

The Brazilian resolution, it is reported, begins with the same principles contained in the Brazilian resolution presented at Buenos Aires in 1936, and then incorporated various points of view contained in Argentine, United States and other proposals circulated informally last week.

The project was reported to have received approval of Dr. Carlos Concha, Peruvian foreign minister. It was translated into English and French this afternoon and a copy was sent to Secretary Hull. Mello Franco expected to discuss the finished project with the smaller delegations singly.

Cuba's proposal for mediation in the Spanish War by American republics was killed by a steering committee vote of 18 to 3, only Cuba, Haiti and Mexico approving. The United States was among the delegations voting aganist it.

The Argentine's more moderate proposal simply calling for an end of the Spanish war will be discussed next.

The conference entered its final week with 155 projects to be considered, but delegates seemed confident the work would be finished by the end of the week.

United States delegates studied with great interest a treaty on economic nonaggression presented by Colombia. The delegates believed they could support it since it takes the same direction as the United States' resolution approved by the conference for liberalizing of trade.

United States delegates were disappointed when the Organization for Peace Committee virtually shelved the United States proposal for unification of existing inter-American peace instruments. The committee sent the plan to the Pan-

D. C. Weighs Tax on Salaries Above $15,000

Group Will Consider Addition to Levy on Unearned Income

By James D. Secrest.

The District Tax Advisory Committee tomorrow will consider a proposal to levy an income tax on salaries of residents of the District earning more than $15,000 a year, it was learned yesterday. As projected, the proposal would be included in the so-called "non-wage, non-salary" income tax plan now before the committee.

Rates of the levy on salaries above $15,000 would be scaled along the lines of the conventional graduated personal income tax.

Offered as a compromise to advocates of a straight-forward income tax modeled somewhat after the Federal levy, the salary tax would have two beneficial results:

It would discourage unincorporated businesses in Washington from incorporating and paying owners large salaries to escape the tax.

It would provide a testing ground for a broader income tax to include Federal salaries as well as others below $15,000.

Minority Is Insistent

The original proposal of the advisory committee contemplated an income tax that would tap only non-earned income at rates of between 2 and 7 per cent. Tied in with this levy was a proposed 2 per cent retail sales tax with food and medicines exempt.

At the last two meetings of the committee, which followed two days of public hearings on Capitol Hill, the citizens' advisory group has been unable to reach an agreement because of insistence of a

First Lady Asks If She and Sons Should Be Idle

Defends Right to Live Own Life; Bars Special Favors From Position

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt vigorously defended yesterday her right to live her own life and that of a President's children to earn their living regardless of their father's position. She asked if the Nation would have them be a family of idlers.

She was speaking, she said, not only for her own family, but on the general proposition involving all Presidents' families.

The American people sooner or later, she said, would have to answer the questions as to what sort of people they wanted in the White House—did they want a family in which the children would make no effort to earn their own living, and in which the wife would renounce all her previous interests and obligations and become totally dependent upon the husband for the period of his Presidency?

Against Special Favors

That might lead, she smiled, to the ridiculous but wholly logical climax that a woman would refuse to live in the White House on such terms.

She respected, she added, the ethical obligation upon a President's family not to profit from the association or use their position for special favors, but she did not feel under obligation to renounce her normal way of living.

Mrs. Roosevelt's defense of her activities was made at her weekly press conference in answer to a question concerning her new venture into the insurance field. It followed announcement that she had become a member of the board of directors of Roosevelt and Sargent, the Boston insurance firm of which

Comptroller Stops 5 Mill Loans in South

Homestead Co-operatives Denied Allotments of Farm Security Funds

Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott yesterday blocked loans totaling $3,050,000 by the Farm Security Administration to five co-operative hosiery mills, chiefly in the South.

Lashing out with the vigor of his former chief, J. R. McCarl, Elliott said the proposed loans to co-operative associations of homesteaders on FSA homestead projects lacked authority in the relief appropriations from which they would be made.

FSA Plans Fight

The loans, which would be used on the projects for the co-operative manufacture of silk products, would create industrial unemployment, Elliott said. He declared they would compete with the South's big product, cotton.

The Farm Security Administration indicated it is not prepared to accept the verdict and will submit new evidence designed to support the legality of the projects.

Cummings Asked To Defend Jewish Slayer of Nazi

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings has been asked to join counsel for the defense of Hershel Grynszpan, the Jewish youth who killed Ernest vom Rath, Nazi embassy attache, in Paris last month, it was disclosed yesterday. Cummings is to retire before the Grynzpan trial begins early next year.

Cummings is understood thus far to have indicated merely that he will give the matter consideration.

About $36,000 has been contributed in the United States to insure a fair trial for Grynszpan as a result of public appeals by Miss Dorothy Thompson, special writer for The Washington Post.

Straus Formally Lends $6,600,000 To Clear D.C. Slums

Nathan Straus, United States housing administrator, yesterday formally executed the $6,600,000 loan to the Alley Dwelling Authority for the first large-scale slum clearance program in the District.

Terms of the loan provide for an immediate transfer of $200,000 to the ADA for initial expenses. The rest of the sum will be paid as the program progresses, to save the local agency from paying interest on money not in use.

The loan was approved December 8 by President Roosevelt, and the ADA signed the contract last Thursday.

Reich Gears Industry to War Speed

Eyes U. S. and Britain; Puts 'Czars' in Charge As Production Lags

By Ralph W. Barnes
Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Dec. 19.—Revolutionary changes in the German economic setup are being carried out as the Nazi leadership forges ahead at a feverish pace with its program of mobilizing in peace all possible material and human resources for war.

Nazi fears that in case of war the Reich might be defeated by American and British industry combined are manifest in a warning delivered by the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeitung that "demands of German industry for more machines must be satisfied unless our economic system is to be forced into second rank by those of Britain and the United States."

Industry "Czars" Named

New developments in Reichsfuehrer Hitler's great peace-time mobilization program are:

Appointments under the four-year plan of "dictators" for key industries which have been functioning inefficiently or require rapid expansion; already such special commissars with dictatorial powers have been named for three such industries, the motor vehicle, machine construction, and building industries.

Complete subordination of the motor vehicle to military ends, with standardization of all trucks and passenger car models for use in war; new truck models are to be limited to from three to four types, based on weight; catering to the public demand for new gadgets on passenger cars will be strictly banned and producers will be forced to maintain each model for several years.

Labor Shortage Acute

Substitution, in the face of an acute shortage of skilled labor, of machine power for manpower through a rapid expansion of the machine building industry.

With Czecho-Slovakia now a vassal state of the Third Reich, transformation of the great Skoda armament plant, situated just across the new frontier, into an adjunct to the German armaments industry; despite reports to the contrary, it is learned that already Skoda is engaged in filling large German orders.

Increased emphasis on development of substitutes for raw materials in which Germany is wholly lacking or deficient;

U. S.-Turkish Trade Pact Hits Anew at Nazis

Contrasts With Reich's Barter Policy; Treaty With Australia Sought

By the Associated Press.

The United States carried its trade expansion program into Turkey yesterday, in competition with spreading German economic influence there, and started to explore possibilities of a reciprocal trade agreement with Australia.

The State Department announced that a new trade pact just initialed with Turkey is based upon the principles of unconditional most-favored-nation treatment and free foreign exchange, the two American trade weapons in direct contrast with Germany's barter and blocked exchange policies.

Moved Before Germany

The new American-Turkish agreement probably will be signed formally in January, the State Department said. It provides mutual tariff concessions on products yet to be announced. Under the unconditional most-favored-nation clause, the concessions the United States makes in the treaty will be extended to all countries except Germany, the Reich being excluded because, officials say, she discriminates against American trade.

The United States announced its intention to negotiate a trade agreement with Turkey last January 12, long before Germany's bold march into Austria and Czecho-Slovakia and her strong efforts to spread her trade empire throughout southeastern Europe.

The pact is the first reached with a Near East country. Its completion closely follows the recent trip to Turkey of the German Economics Minister, Walther Funk, who concluded an agreement October 7 to lend the Turkish government about $65,000,000 for armament and industrial development.

Buys Half Turk Exports

Funk also visited Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, and subsequently announced from Berlin that the three countries "form a kind of Balkan axis which reaches from the German border to the Black Sea."

Germany now buys about 50 per cent of Turkey's exports, the United States about 10 per cent, chiefly tobacco. Other Turkish products on which the United States had announced it would consider tariff reductions included licorice, filberts and pistache nuts, poppy and canary seeds, Oriental and other rugs and meerschaum.

Exiled German Poet Proposes Democratic Pool to Feed Spain

A proposal that the democracies of the world pool resources to feed the starving on both sides of the Spanish civil war was advanced in official circles here yesterday by Ernst Toller, German novelist, playwright and poet.

ERNST TOLLER

He said State Department officials here showed "a genuine eagerness" toward the plan.

Toller proposes to establish a central agency to distribute surplus food and clothing. The Society of Friends, already engaged in relief work behind both fronts in Spain, has agreed to carry out the actual distribution, Toller said.

The author declared yesterday that "the United States has a surplus of 300,000,000 bushels of wheat; 125,000 tons of surplus wheat and rye exist in Sweden; Norway has several hundred thousand tons of fish, milk and butter." Removal of these surpluses, he suggested, would help producers in the various countries, while distribution of the food in Spain would answer an urgent need.

Governments unable to contribute food would give financial aid, Toller said, pointing out that 13 nations have already donated money to the International Commission for the Assistance of Child Refugees from Spain in Geneva.

Toller declared that in rebel-controlled territory, the need for food

More Contributions Swell Fund for Neediest Families

Yesterday's contributions to The Post's 1938 Neediest Families Fund brought the total received to date to $1,945.54—within $300 of the amount needed to care for every one of the 20 "neediest families" reported by The Post this year.

Each family—selected from among hundreds of similar cases in the District—is ineligible for or cannot receive the type of assistance most needed from any source other than the Neediest Families Fund.

Each family was investigated thoroughly by a member agency of the D. C. Council of Social Agencies, highly recommended as deserving of aid at this time.

Each—as a result of the timely assistance they receive from the fund—may go on to become self-supporting, independent, permanently off the relief roles of this or any other community.

Banana Peel Skids Girl Into Fortune And Romance

Milan, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Teresa Nallini, a 20-year-old chambermaid, slipped on a banana peel and her purse fell on the sidewalk, scattering all the money she had. Paolo Fumagelli, 24, happened to be passing and helped her pick up the money.

Paolo, a lottery bettor, suggested she count the coins, add her age and his to it, and buy a lottery ticket.

THE TRUST BUSTERS—I

Candid camera shots of the Monopoly Committee trust busters.

Col. Patterson

O'MAHONEY: Sugar-coated reformer. The eagle-eyed Senator is a transplanted New Englander. In 1917 he was stenographer to Sen. Kendrick, of Wyoming, whom he succeeded in 1933. He has been a city editor, lawyer, First Assistant Postmaster General under Farley. Ambitious, suave, eloquent, conciliatory, the 54-year-old chairman's reform zeal is abated by the usual White House dreams.

* * * *

BORAH: Never been harnessed. This elder frontier statesman, long a trust-buster at heart, seems to follow the Pilgrims' Progress of this committee of his heart's desire with the amused detachment of a philosopher. He grew up in Illinois and Kansas, was a lawyer for 17 years before he began his 31-year service as Idaho's progressive senator. At 73, a defender of the Constitution, property rights, capitalism, it is clear now to his critics that his "radicalism" was an illusion.

* * * *

KING: Laertes in a starched collar. His learned, substantial but dull speeches clear the Senate galleries. He spent three years in England as a young Mormon missionary. His conservatism is illustrated by this Democrat's opposition to WPA. At 74 he is rounding out a fourth term as Utah Senator, erudite, ponderous, prolix, a bulwark of the status quo. All three Senators are neighbors in the Buffalo Bill country.

". . . trust buster with cow"

ARNOLD: An elusively brilliant professor of law and paradox, the 47-year-old Asst. Att'y General keeps a cow up the Potomac from the Capital while he X-rays business. He grew up in Wyoming, studied at Princeton and Harvard, taught at Yale. He served his country in the Army, SEC, AAA and as mayor of Laramie, Wyo., owns a Phi Beta Kappa key. His love of paradox modifies his pace as a reformer; he sees both sides. His agnostic book, "Folklore of Capitalism," is a ghost at the feast.

* * * *

PATTERSON: A Park Avenue Democrat who grew up in Nebraska . . . Almost 53, the handsome, courtly, ruddy Assistant Secretary of Commerce could pass for 40. He is one of those rare ones who realize that tact and diplomacy are as vital in domestic and intramural affairs as in foreign. He was an executive officer at the Paris peace conference, helped organize the American Legion, has several medals in his knicknack drawer. An engineer, bank director, NBC official, he once declined a Fusion nomination for Mayor

* * * *

DOUGLAS: Another untamed Yale professor from Yakima and Walla Walla; another frontiersman scouting the East. Self-made; proud he arrived in New York with 6 cents. Probably as radical as Daniel Boone. He guides the SEC with a steel mitt in a velvet glove, but younger Wall Streeters tend to forgive him because he catches the Street where its conscience is tender. Sandy, lanky, Jeffersonian, with a drawl: At 40, top-shelf Presidential timber.

". . . clinic on Big Business"

FRANK: Dialectician who dislikes arguments. Only native New Yorker among the trust-busters, but grew up in Chicago's wide-open spaces. The average Congressman, caught in the crossfire of his eloquence, would turn pale and hide behind a highball. His legal wit has bolstered the New Deal in agriculture, railroads, power and PWA; once Henry Wallace reluctantly purged him; now he's on the SEC and Douglas' understudy among the trust-busters, but at 49 headed for a judgeship.

* * * *

OLIPHANT: Merlin of the Treasury. A hot-eyed 54-year-old New Dealer who got his start under Woodrow Wilson. He grew up in Indiana, taught law at Chicago, Columbia, Johns Hopkins. Justice Harlan Stone is his friend and mentor. Of the important New Dealers he is the champ limelight ducker. He was one of the Treasury's cooks in devaluation and the wondrous "silver purchase" program, and became a human flame thrower for his undistributed profits tax . . . Zealot for redistribution of income.

* * * *

PEOPLES: Frugal seadog. From Iowa via California, the Admiral is Oliphant's substitute when Treasury problems need the professor's urgent attention. He has haggled over supplies for the Navy since 1900, and at 62 he knows something about monopoly and competition, after three years as director of procurement for the Treasury. Like all Navy men he is, of course, conservative and non-political.

There's not a full-blown Easterner among the first nine. The other seven trust-busters will be described Thursday, with box score.

Court Enjoins Publicity on Coal Mine Costs

Bituminous Board Told To Keep Records Secret Till Hearing Jan. 3

By Robert C. Albright.

The National Bituminous Coal Commission yesterday was enjoined by the Supreme Court against publication of "confidential" cost and price data of 19 coal companies, pending review by the tribunal of the commission's power to make the disclosures.

The court set arguments on the controversy for January 3, meanwhile barring the commission "from introducing in any hearings before said commission and from making available for inspection to interested parties, or others, the individual verified costs and price realization costs of petitioners."

Contending Congress intended "to protect the confidential nature of these reports of code members," the coal companies had charged administrative agencies with exceeding their authority under law and had asked protection of the rights of citizens "when threatened by action of administrative agencies."

The commission claimed the right to make public the data at hearings, under section 10 (a) of the coal law. Challenging its authority, the coal companies charged "multiplication in recent years of these powers" and said publication of the figures would subject them to irreparable damage.

The Supreme Court meanwhile took under review cases testing the right of a State to collect income taxes from employes of Federal agencies and reviewing the power of State utility commissioners to order temporary utility rates pending promulgation of permanent structures.

No formal opinions were handed down yesterday, as the court ordered a recess until January 3. Solemnly the justices heard Attorney General Cummings present a Supreme Court bar resolution describing the death last summer of Justice Cardoza as a "grevious loss to the court."

In reply, Chief Justice Hughes said Cardoza was "a mighty warrior for his convictions" and "no judge ever came to this court more fully equipped by learning, acumen, dialectical skill and disinterested purpose."

Tax Case Accepted

In another of the long series of cases testing the right of States to tax income received from the Federal Government, the court agreed to review the New York Supreme Court's decision that the State could not tax $2,246 in salary received in 1934 by James B. O'Keefe as attorney for the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation.

President Roosevelt has recommended reciprocal taxation of Federal and State salaries and the court's decision is expected to have significant bearing on possible Congressional action.

The utility case also taken under review may have an important bearing on shifts in the Nation's utility rate structure. The Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission had appealed to the court for reversal of a three-judge court ruling enjoining the commission against fixing temporary rates to be charged by the Edison Light & Power Co. for electric service. The company contended the temporary rates were "confiscatory."

Firms See No Resort

In the coal company case, lower courts had held the commission's authority to order publication of the "confidential" price data was not reviewable.

Petitioning the high court, the coal companies argued that unless the lower courts were reversed "there is no way known to petitioners whereby the legality of an administrative body's action in relation to a 'procedural' matter, which action inflicts upon persons subject to its jurisdiction irreparable damage, can be tested in a judicial proceeding."

They said the earlier rulings mean "that administrative bodies in connection with what are called "procedural" matters may violate with impunity the statute from which they derive their authority."

U. S. Can Borrow Million for $14.40

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., told reporters with satisfaction yesterday that the Federal Government is now able to borrow for 91 days $100,000,000 in the form of Treasury bills at a cost of $1,440.

The sale of these bills on December 16, reached a new low record, or at an average cost of 0.006 per cent. The previous low was 0.011 per cent.

On the basis of the new figures it is costing the Government in interest only $14.40 to borrow $1,000,000 for 90 or 1.4 cents for $1,000 for the same period.

A. F. L. to Discuss Legislative Program; Caskie Head of Interstate Commerce

The legislative program of the American Federation of Labor will be given preliminary consideration today at a meeting of representatives of the 102 national and international unions in the Federation, all departments of the A. F. of L., and all of the rail brotherhoods.

GREEN

William Green, Federation president, will preside. A new secretary will be selected by the legislative conference to succeed Gilbert Hyatt.

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced yesterday Commissioner Marion M. Caskie has been elected chairman for one year, starting January 1, in accordance with a policy of rotating the chairmanship among the members.

Caskie, born in Virginia and formerly a resident of Montgomery, Ala., was appointed to the commission in 1935.

Senator Herring (Democrat) Iowa, said yesterday he would be unable to reply until after the holidays to a request from Senator Bridges (Republican) New Hampshire, that he join in asking for a Congressional investigation of the Nebraska public power situation.

"I still stand on my earlier statement that I believe he would be justified in asking for an investigation if he could substantiate his charges, but it doesn't seem possible that the situation which he alleges could exist," Herring said.

Bridges had said that an agent would make $2,225,000 out of the proposed purchase of Nebraska privately owned power properties by PWA-financed public power districts. He sent Herring a number of exhibits to support his charges.

Despite the inclination of minority Leader Charles L. McNary to shelve the issue, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday expressed belief that the Senate should express itself against a third term for the President "because silence might be construed as consent."

FHA Reports Increase in Loans Handled

Small Home Mortgages In Area Show 166% Gain in Past Year

A considerable increase in the volume of business handled by the District office of the Federal Housing Administration during the past year was reported yesterday by Henry H. Dearing, District director.

Small home mortgages selected for appraisal in the District and adjacent Maryland and Virginia showed a gain of 166 per cent in number and 154 per cent in dollar amount. Mortgages accepted for insurance showed a gain of 67 per cent in number and 61 per cent in dollar amount.

Construction of new homes represented 69 per cent of the total number of mortgages accepted by the office, as compared with 26 per cent during 1937. This indicates, Dearing said, that the practice of submitting home mortgages to the FHA before beginning construction has taken root in the District.

Premium-paying mortgages also showed gains during the last year, with a 10 per cent increase in number and a 6 per cent increase in dollar amount. Dearing said that the potential premium paying business this year is higher, since a mortgage does not become premium paying until the structure is formally approved by the F. H. A.

Modernization notes insured in the District area since the beginning of the program have totaled about 20,000 for $9,400,000. Since the restoration of the Property Improvement Credit Plan last February, modernization notes numbering almost 5,000 in the District and adjacent Maryland and Virginia have been insured amounting to slightly under $2,000,000.

Bund Chief Faces Loss of Citizenship

Los Angeles, Dec. 19 (AP).—United States Attorney Benjamin Harrison asked cancellation of the 1932 naturalization certificate of Herman Max Schwinn, West Coast director of the German-American Bund, in a complaint filed in Federal court today.

Harrison charged that although Gebhard Foerstel and George E. Martins submitted affidavits, in connection with Schwinn's citizenship application, that they had known him since 1927 and he was of good moral character, they did not meet him until the next year.

Harrison and Adams Serve Notice of Drive To Slash Federal Spending in Next Session

Plain-spoken warnings against resumption of heavy Federal spending were voiced yesterday by influential members of the Senate Finance and Appropriations Committees, as the Administration's program began to take shape at continued White House conferences.

In a speech in Detroit, Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, said further increase in taxes cannot be avoided "unless there is an immediate and radical change in our spending policy." He said reduction in spending is "the most appealing and necessary course."

At the Capitol, Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, member of the Senate Appropriations group, said he favored, as always, "adequate defense" but thought it time to "give some thought to the deficit." While Harrison urged reduction in relief and other emergency spending, Adams said he had not considered what Congress will be asked to do for relief.

Confers on Air Defense

Meanwhile the President conferred at the White House on two signal points in his program—national defense and railroad relief legislation.

Proposed aviation aids to defense he discussed with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Chairman Edward J. Noble and Robert Hinkley, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and Aubrey Williams, Deputy WPA administrator.

Two members of the President's informal committee preparing railroad relief recommendations reported briefly to him on their progress. They were Carl Gray, vice chairman of the Union Pacific, and George Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives association.

Harrison predicted a full report to the President by the end of the month. Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, has promised to "do all in his power" to enact as much of the rail program as he can go along with once labor and rail leaders are agreed.

Reorganization Slated

In addition to defense and probable rail relief recommendations, Government reorganization and social security act revision and extension already have been definitely added to the Administration's program.

Policies on the most explosive issue of the session—modification of the Wagner labor relations act—remain to be formulated. The fight for revision is expected to break around reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith to the labor board, which is opposed by the American Federation of Labor and a strong Senate bloc. The President may be urged to withdraw the appointment of Smith to soften the controversy.

Senator Harrison, in the first of a series of speeches at Detroit, South Bend and Cincinnati, said the country is "suffering from high blood pressure."

"Proper Diet and Rest"

"No common agreement can be reached by the diagnosticians," he said, "but we must agree that if the exercise has been too violent, some modification must be employed and proper diet and rest be practiced."

Urging curtailment of spending, rather than increase in taxes, Harrison said he believed "too high taxes have been one of the controlling forces in checking the industrial advancement and natural development of the country." He said that if taxes are too high, capital will not be invested in new enterprise and new ventures to give new employment to thousands.

Harrison cautioned that every source of revenue has been tapped, that taxes are now higher than in any other peace-time period, and that surtaxes in the higher brackets have reached the point of diminishing returns. He said "wise economists have and will always agree that there is a point above which Government returns will not increase, but will diminish."

New Tax Bill Forecast

The Finance Committee chairman, who succeeded last session in reducing the undivided-profits tax to a vestige despite Administration opposition, said another tax bill will be necessary to continue the $500,000,000 in revenue raised by expiring nuisance taxes, and the $1,300,000,000 yield of the tax on corporate earnings.

Hunter Finds Long-Missing Woman Dead

Mrs. Ella Stone, Who Disappeared in '37, Feared Foul Play Victim

Glen Burnie, Md., Dec. 19.—A 20-month-old mystery was revived here today when a hunter discovered the decomposed body of Mrs. Ella Stone, 76, who had been missing since April 1, 1937.

The body was found by John Sowers in a wood near Dorrs Corner, approximately 6¼ miles from where the woman lived.

Following an examination of the woman's skull, the only part of the skeleton that was not so badly decomposed as to prevent analysis, Dr. Joseph Lipskey declared there was no evidence of foul play. The skull, he said, revealed no marks of violence, nor was there any other indication that the woman might have been beaten or shot. An inquest is scheduled for Wednesday.

Foul Play Indicated

Clews pointing, however, to the possibility of foul play were revealed by Chief John H. Souers, jr., of the Anne Arundel police force. He pointed out that Mrs. Stone was known to have been wearing two rings, one of them a gold wedding band and the other a diamond. Both are missing. In addition, part of the dead woman's clothes could not be found.

Chief Souers also expressed amazement at how the woman had wandered into the thick woods as far from her home as 6¼ miles. The chief said that when the body was recovered the men were forced to beat their way through dense underbrush and thickets in order to reach the scene.

Son Identifies Body

Positive identification of the body was made by Mrs. Stone's son, Harry Stone. He said a sweater found on the body was his and that his mother was wearing it the day she disappeared.

The woman's disappearance prompted one of the largest organized hunts in the history of Anne Arundel County. More than a hundred residents of this rural community, including Boy Scout troops and CCC workers, were mobilized for the search.

Truck and Trolley Crash Near White House; 4 Hurt as Steel Bar Jams Through Car's Side

Four persons were hurt yesterday when this truck plowed into the left front portion of a street car in front of the White House. The motorman escaped injury but four passengers were hurt slightly

Two women and two men were injured late yesterday when a heavy coal truck smashed into the side of a crowded street car in front of the White House on Pennsylvania avenue in a freak crash that tied up trolley and auto traffic for more than an hour.

The side rail of the coal truck's body was driven through the left front of the street car cab, narrowly missing the motorman, H. L. Bledsoe, 30, and sending a shower of glass through the car.

A second coal truck, following close behind, crashed into the rear of the first truck, driving the rail almost half way down the length of the street car. It landed between the feet of a woman who escaped injury.

None Injured Seriously

The injured were Miss Edith Wilcox, 21, off Vienna, Va., cut by glass on the nose and left foot; Miss Mildred Maier, 25, of 1313 North Carolina avenue northeast, cut about the legs by glass; George Athanas, 48, of 637 Princeton place northwest, cut on the right knee, and Angelo Ferraro, 45, of 620 Florence street northeast, who suffered an injured back. All were treated at Emergency Hospital. Their injuries were not believed to be serious.

Driver of the coal truck which rammed the street car, Sherman L. Clory, 30, colored, was booked at Precinct Station No. 3 on a charge of reckless driving. Five other colored men riding in the two coal trucks were not held.

The street car was en route to Benning, proceeding toward Fifteenth street on Pennsylvania avenue. The trucks, coming from the opposition direction, swerved across the track and struck the trolley almost head-on.

Autos in Minor Crashes

One of the colored men was pinched by heavy steel reinforcement attached to the railing when the trolley backed up in an attempt to disengage. Trapped between the flat bottom of the truck and the reinforcement, the man screamed and the motorman stopped the car while police and pedestrians helped disengage the man, uninjured.

Two dozen street cars were stalled up and down Pennsylvania avenue during the tie-up which followed the accident at 5:45 p. m. Several minor bumps between automobiles occurred in the confusion. The smashed truck was Alaska Coal Co. truck No. 13.

Arlington Marriages Set New Record

Double Old Mark for Day; One Performed In 35 Seconds

All marriage records in Arlington County were broken yesterday as hurried couples, barred by a 72-hour waiting period decree in Alexandria, sought a new Gretna Green.

More than doubling the previous record for marriages in one day, 21 licenses were issued yesterday in Arlington. Of the 21 couples 15 were married immediately at the nearby office of Bryan Gordon, attorney invested by the Circuit Court with the right to perform marriages.

Meanwhile only two licenses were issued in Alexandria as 14 couples quit the courthouse on being told of the new three-day wait after filing application.

One License Granted

In issuing one of the two licenses, Elliot F. Hoffman, clerk of the Corporation Court, invoked his discretionary power to grant the permit immediately on application. Hoffman said he knew the characters of both parties, who were residents of Alexandria.

Commenting on the decline in applicants over last week when couples were licensed and married immediately on application, Hoffman said, "Everything is well in hand. Only the usual number of licenses is being issued now."

In neighboring Arlington no action to restrain the rush of hurry-up couples was contemplated by county officials. After asking an opinion of Commonwealth Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Circuit Court Clerk C. Benjamin Laycock said no action to delay licensing of couples would be undertaken for the present.

Married in 35 Seconds

Some of the marriages performed in Arlington yesterday were performed with a speed that shamed the quickest of former Elkton, Md., nuptials. A Post reporter timed one ceremony as being performed in 35 seconds flat.

Taxicabs from Washington and Alexandria reaped a harvest as picking up the Elkton technique they rushed couples to Arlington Courthouse. Some drivers were reported to be receiving as much as $10 per trip from grateful newlyweds.

In Fairfax only the usual number of Monday marriage licenses was issued, with six applying. Fairfax County Clerk John M. Whalen warned Sunday that he would follow the precedent of Alexandria in delaying marriages if circumstances warranted such a move.

Gangs Bribed G-Man, Jury Reported Told

'Dixie' Davis Talks; Justice Aide Ousted, Relative Under Fire

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 19.—The New York Post says in a copyrighted story that evidence is being presented to a Federal grand jury that a high official of the U. S. Department of Justice took bribes from two once-notorious gangsters while the Government was prosecuting them.

The official, now dead, was suspended, the paper says, after a secret Government investigation.

The mobsters named were Johnny Torrio, who created one of the first racket empires, and the infamous Dutch Schultz, slain by racketeers in a Newark bar in 1935.

Go-Between Still Living

The paper says the grand jury is being asked to indict a relative of the former official who allegedly acted as a go-between.

There was no indication that any other official was involved, but the investigation was said to be incomplete regarding the former official's activities and that he may have dealt with "other gangsters, with several industrialists who tried to evade taxes and with a racketeering labor leader."

The rackets investigation of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and the subsequent arrest of J. Richard "Dixie" Davis, "mouthpiece" for the Dutch Schultz and other gangs, was said to have led to the disclosure.

Gangster Lawyer Talked

The Government was trying to build an income tax case against Torrio and found the disbarred lawyer willing to talk.

He related, the Post says, that he represented Torrio in the tax matters and surprised them by adding that he had paid bribes to the official. The investigators, however, were not sure Davis' story was entirely accurate.

A thorough investigation of the official and a close check on all cases he handled followed. More specific information was obtained and the official was suspended.

1 Hurt, 20 Trapped In Apartment Fire

Fire sweeping through the eighth floor of the Monmouth Apartments, 1819 G street northwest, yesterday trapped more than 20 residents and resulted in serious burns to one man.

Timothy McCarthy, 38-year-old Government draftsman, received severe burns to his face, head and neck when flames leaped through his apartment door. He had been awakened by the screams of Mrs. Ruth Thorne, social security employe, who discovered the blaze.

Firemen battled the flames for about 15 minutes before occupants could be permitted to leave. The fire apparently started in a closet in the hallway where paper and boxes were stored. The police report said the blaze was due to spontaneous combustion.

McCarthy was taken to Emergency Hospital where his condition was said to be undetermined.

Takoma Park League Tables Merger Plan

attorney, since that phase of the investigation of the $87,000,000 firm lay outside the State's jurisdiction.

Coster-Musica was in his New York office when he first broached the rifle and cartridge contract, Wingersky said.

"He outlined the proposition, saying the English company of Standard Oil and McKesson & Robbins were interested in the purchase of Lee-Enfield rifles," the lawyer said. "I told him I would have to ascertain if our firm had the legal right to buy any rifles. I drew up drafts of a contract that I would approve and subsequently I presented it at Mr. Coster's direction to Ben Simon."

Wingersky said he had ascertained through a Mr. McGloom, whom he described as comptroller of the McKesson & Robbins firm in their Bridgeport, Conn., office, that Simon lived in the Bronx and had been on the corporation's pay roll from time to time.

Simon, he said, owed the corporation $2,410 on two notes.

"What was the amount of the contract?" asked McCall.

Guns to Go to Britain

"For 100,000 new Lee-Enfield rifles of .30 caliber. The contract calls for the rearrangement for the export and delivery of the rifles to a 'friendly, noncombatant consignee, whose ambassador will attest to the friendly nature of the consignee.'

"The contract also directed that the 'rifles were to be shipped to a British port designated by us and also that arrangements were to be made for the removal of the rifles from arsenals.'"

McCall asked him if he knew a "Mrs. Lucas" in the financial district, but Wingersky said he could not recall having met such a person, and he denied he had ever told her "that McKesson & Robbins had authorized him to sell 1,250,000 of these Lee-Enfield rifles."

The discrepancy between this figure and the figure in the contract was not explained.

"Mrs. Lucas," identified later as Mrs. Susan B. Lucas, a broker, of 50 Broad street, appeared later at the attorney general's office in the State building in response to a subpena. She conferred privately with Assistant State Attorney General Joseph Ruggieri, and it was understood she told him of a meeting which took place in her office between a Ben Simon, described as a representative of McKesson & Robbins, and John M. Kantor, introduced to her as a prospective buyer of munitions by a man named Lloyd Brooks, an importer.

At the same time, Ruggieri, who went to Canada last week to locate the five warehouses where the McKesson & Robbins crude drug supplies supposedly were stored, reported the firm had rented a warehouse in Montreal for five years which had been erected in 1916 for the U. S. Government for storage of ammunition and war implements.

McKesson and Robbins, Ruggieri said, paid the owner, J. Bierman, identified as a reputable citizen, $12,000 a year. The lease expired in 1936 and Ruggieri said he understood the building had not been occupied since that time.

Another Boston connection with the Coster-Musica case appeared late tonight when Edmund J. Brandon, former regional examiner in New England for the Securities and Exchange Commission, disclosed he and his law partner, John J. Burns, former general counsel of the SEC, were retained December 12 by Coster-Musica to represent McKesson & Robbins and Coster himself in a hearing in New York before the SEC.

Brandon said he and his partner withdrew from the case, however, on December 16 after they concluded statements made to them concerning their client's case were not true. He added they returned a retainer fee of $28,576 before they knew of Coster's prison record and before he killed himself.

While McMahon and other Federal officials were conferring in the Federal building, Coster-Musica, who killed himself last Friday in his Italian villa at Fairfield, Conn., after he was revealed as the "brains" of a swindle 25 years ago, was buried in a silver casket from a Brooklyn funeral home.

Two of the three brothers, who masked their identity and joined him in the McKesson & Robbins firm, attended the funeral by special court permission—George Vernard-Arthur Musica, Canadian agent for the firm, and Robert Dietrich-Musica, who worked in the shipping department at Fairfield. Both were handcuffed to Federal deputies.

Coster-Musica was interred in Cypress Hills Cemetery, but his widow, Carol, who had spent the night at the funeral home, did not go to the graveyard. At the cemetery an attendant said the body was placed in a mausoleum. He said two mourners were at the cemetery, John O. Jenkins, a brother of Mrs. Coster, and one of the three Musica sisters.

Meanwhile Mrs. George Vernard Musica tearfully faced dispossession from her Brooklyn home and the loss of her husband's expensive motor car.

Two banks notified her payments were overdue and foreclosures would be effected.

FREDERIC WINGERSKY,

Her only money, she said, was $20 of the $25 her husband gave her that day as the usual weekly sum for operating the household.

Unlisted trading in McKesson & Robbins stock continued today, with all securities showing a slight rise of less than a ponit. Important manufacturers throughout the country made a hopeful gesture for the investors when they announced they would continue to deal with the corporation.

Dewey's investigation took nine days, during which more than 40 persons were questioned. Nine of them testified before the grand jury. There was no evidence of any blackmail having been paid by any of the brothers; neither was their evidence of what had become of the funds taken from the McKesson & Robbins treasury.

The bewildering juggling which went on through the five fictitious companies started in 1929, according to Dewey, and began with Vernard selling crude drugs to Coster.

Any one of the five companies could be used, and often the bookkeeping involved all five. Despite the lack of evidence as to the ultimate destination of the cash, it has been shown, according to Dewey, that between February 17, 1928, and December 10, 1938, $7,693,146 passed through Vernard's personal account in the Chase National Bank. In the last seven years, $4,049,721 passed through the account of W. W. Smith in its various banks.

The regular December Federal grand jury will start its hearings tomorrow, and will be held over through January. The reason for the holdover, McMahon said, was that "we are coming into possession of other leads continually." Thirty-five persons have been subpenaed to appear tomorrow or Wednesday, among them Mrs. Carol Coster, widow of Philip, and Grace and Louise Musica, two of the three sisters.

Trustee Resigns

Federal Judge A. G. Coxe announced tonight his approval of the resignation of Charles F. Michaels as an additional trustee of McKesson & Robbins, and Michaels' immediate appointment as chief executive assistant of the firm during reorganization proceedings.

Michaels pointed out that he and the executives under him had no connection with the crude drug department of the firm, under the control of the Musica brothers, that caused the firm's trouble.

Washington authorities tonight also began a check of records to ascertian if any discarded military equipment had ever been obtained by McKesson & Robbins. Large quantities of Lee-Enfield rifles which are of British design had been manufactured for Canada early in the World War, and later were used by the United States after this country entered the conflict. Federal officials said, however, the Government had sold no serviceable rifles of this make since the World War.

Records of prohibition investigations of 1926 and subsequent years also were being checked in an attempt to verify the alleged operations in alcohol and perfume of the Musica brothers. It was stated Arthur Musica, now George Vernard, was the central figure of the brothers in setting up phoney perfume plants and in obtaining alcohol permits.

D. C. Weighs Tax on Salaries Above $15,000

Taxes

minority upon an outright graduated personal income tax.

At tomorrow's session, according to Chairman Daniel J. Donovan, the committee will make another effort to come to a decision and will consider "the form of a report" to the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Court Test Likely

Sponsors of the compromise plan hope it will satisfy the 100 per cent income tax proponents and at the same time will provide a basis for a broader tax if the United States Supreme Court upholds the constitutionality of imposing a District levy on Federal salaries.

They believe the tax will be contested at once because it will fall on very few Federal salaries. At the same time the litigation will not endanger the District's new revenue as a single all-embrasive personal income tax might.

To avoid endangering the whole income tax section of the combined income-sales tax, the compromise plan would attach the provision affecting salaries above $15,000 in such a way that it could be declared unconstitutional without impairing the entire act.

Might Mollify House

Aside from the constitutional issue proponents of the compromise plan point out it would afford a practical solution to the problem of putting a local income tax through the House.

As the House has twice refused to approve an outright income tax, they point out, chances would be against passage next session so long as it applies to Federal salaries. With all but a few Federal salaries exempt, however, the tax might be acceptable.

While present indications are that the majority will approve the combination sales-income tax, when a vote finally is taken, a minority of dissenting votes, and possibly a minority report, are anticipated.

The $15,000 salary division line for taxation purposes is understood to have been suggested because of the act which allows the House Ways and Means Committee each year to make public the Treasury's report of salaries in excess of that amount.

Sales Tax Under Fire

The non-wage, non-salary provisions of the tax, however, would not be affected by this section in that so-called unearned income from investments would be taxed with possibly only $1,500 exemption.

The sales tax is still a subject for considerable debate within the committee, and a mass of statistical tables is being studied to ascertain how the levy would apply to low and high incomes.

Its sponsors, however, argue that it offers the surest means of raising revenue in an admittedly difficult tax dilemma, while the more complicated issues relative to an income tax are determined by experience and litigation.

Comptroller Stops 5 Mill Loans in South

Veto

moreland homesteads project in Pennsylvania and a wood factory at the Tygart Valley homesteads in West Virginia were cited.

Elliott said the Westmoreland and Tygart loans were approved under earlier appropriation acts providing greater administrative discretion in the use of funds.

While not closing the door to new evidence on validity of the later loans, Elliott said:

"No showing of necessity in the administration of projects has been made and it is doubtful a satisfactory showing could be made."

Loans barred by yesterday's ruling were: $750,000 to the Cumberland Co-operative Co., Cumberland Homesteads, Tennessee; $750,000 to the Red House, W. Va., association; $750,000 to the Penderlea, N. C., Farms Homsteads; $490,000 to the Skyline (Ala.) Industrial Co., and $310,000 to the Homestead Industrail Co., Bankhead Farms, Ala.

Elliott's ruling marked renewal of the clash between the Comptroller General's office and administrative agencies on legal use of Federal funds that formerly found McCarl at frequent issue with New Deal spending policies.

In the reorganization bill defeated last session, and to be revived in the next Congress by the President, the Comptroller General's office would be abolished, and an auditor general set up with powers only of post-audit.

Too Late, Says FSA Official

One FSA official said the money already has been lent, part of it has been spent, contracts have been signed, and there was little the agency could now do about it.

Elliott in his ruling said that "subsidizing the manufacture of silk hosiery on subsistence homestead projects does not appear to come within the contemplated field of agricultural relief, or rural rehabilitation."

He said on the contrary there were indications "that the undertaking tends to defeat the whole purpose and intent of the emergency relief appropriation act of 1938 to supplement private employment and provide rural rehabilitation, by throwing industrial workers out of employment and giving rise to increased competition with cotton, the chief agricultural product of the South."

STEPHEN W. GAMBRILL

Rep. Gambrill, Of Maryland, Dies at Capitol

Heart Attack Fatal To House Member In Doctor's Office

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, 65, of Maryland, died of a heart attack yesterday at the United States Capitol.

According to the Capitol physician, Dr. George W. Calver, Gambrill suffered two heart attacks during the day.

He appeared in good health yesday morning, but after several conferences he told his secretary he intended to go to Dr. Calver's office for an examination.

About 2 p. m. he summoned the physician, but when Dr. Calver arrived the Congressman was starting to walk to the doctor's office. He said he was "feeling all right now," but Dr. Calver sent him to the Capitol in a taxicab.

When he arrived at the physician's office he seemed to have improved, but suddenly cried out, "the pain is coming back," and before aid could be administered he was dead.

In House Since 1924

Ten minutes after Representative Gambrill's death, his wife, the former Miss Edna Armacost, of Baltimore, arrived at Dr. Calver's office.

A Democrat, Representative Gambrill had represented the Fifth Maryland District in Congress since 1924. He was a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

To fill the vacancy caused by his death it will be necessary that the Governor proclaim a special election. The Maryland election law specifies 20 days' notice of the election. Congress convenes in the first week in January, making it impossible for such notice to be given before the session begins.

In 1934 and again in this year's elections it was rumored that Representative Gambrill would not seek re-election because of ill health. Last February he issued a statement that he "resented very much" accusations that bad health had prevented his attendance in Congress.

Twice State Legislator

Representative Gambrill was born near Savage, Howard County, Md. He attended the Maryland Agricultural College, now a part of Maryland University, and was graduated from the George Washington University law school in Washington.

Admitted to the bar in 1897, he had practiced law in Baltimore since 1908. He was a member of the Maryland Legislature in the sessions of 1920 and 1922, and in 1924 he was elected to the State Senate.

The same year he was elected to Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Representative Sidney E. Mudd. He had been re-elected to every subsequent Congress.

Representative Gambrill is survived by three children by a previous marriage: Stephen W. Gambrill, jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Louise Quill, both of Laurel, Md., and Mrs. Charles Brooks, Chevy Chase, Md.

Speaker Bankhead was notified at his home in Alabama of Gambrill's death and will appoint a committee to represent the House at the funeral tonight or tomorrow morning.

A.F.G.E. Dodges United Agitation

The American Federation of Government Employes yesterday displayed little interest in the plea of the NLRB independent union for all the Federal employe unions to unite in a campaign for a Federal five-day week.

Col. Charles I. Stengle, A. F. G. E. president, said his organization already had a program, which called for establishment of the 5-day, 35-hour week. The other employe organizations have five-day programs also. The NLRB president, Norman Mathias, had requested the A. F. G. E., the National Federation of Federal Employes and the United Federal Workers of America to set up a joint committee to push the five-day proposal, in a drive that would bring all the union forces together.

New Book Tells Of Nazi Aims In America

Nation's 'Reconstruction' Quoted as Forecast In Stuttgart Paper

Nazi claims to the allegiance of men and women of German blood, in whatever country they live, are termed a cause of "unrest and possible bloodshed" in the United States is the foreword to a volume of excerpts from official German documents and speeches, published in New York City yesterday.

Sponsors of the book include Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State; Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University; Felix Frankfurter, of the Harvard Law School; George Wharton Pepper, former Senator from Pennsylvania, and Nathan Straus, United States housing administrator.

The foreign division of the National Socialist Party, the foreword warns, does not confine its interest to German citizens abroad, but "reaches out to all so-called 'Volksgenossen,' or racial comrades."

Free Nazi News in U. S.

"German newspapers in the United States are supplied with free news services," it is pointed out. "German schools with free educational materials, and German radio listeners with special short-wave broadcasts. This propaganda is all directed toward one goal; to instill in the American citizens of German descent a consciousness of the German 'race' and a feeling of allegiance toward the German Reich."

Aside from the brief preface, the volume consists entirely of German government decrees or quotations from speeches, books and newspaper articles which must be approved by Nazi leaders.

In Stuttgart, scene of the annual rallies sponsored by the foreign division of the Nazi Party, one newspaper printed the following statement of objectives:

"We want to bring the Germans in the United States, who in part have become alienated from the German fatherland, back to the great community of blood and fate of all Germans. To this end the spiritual regeneration of the Germans after the model of the homeland is necessary.

To "Reconstruct America"

"When we will have attained this goal, we will organize the Germans in order to give them economic reinforcement and political schooling.

"German-Americans, thus prepared, shall then be used under our leadership in the coming struggle with communism and Jewry in the reconstruction of America."

The 1937 yearbook of the German-American Volksbund issues the following call to action:

"Within the next few years, the entire unified strength of Germandom will be necessary in order to check the shrinkage in the German population through the Americanization of its youth."

is apparent only in the war-torn regions, but "there is a serious shortage of clothing throughout the rebel area." In loyalist Spain, he said, the children's death rate is rapidly mounting, while in Madrid alone there are 40,000 cases of pellagra.

"My idea springs from a conception of human solidarity," Toller exclaimed. "I am acting absolutely independently. When this project gets under way, I shall return to my writing desk."

Baptists Plan Drastic Protest To Rumania

May Picket Legation Here, Hold Mass Meeting, Says Weaver

Leaders of Northern and Southern Baptist conventions are considering drastic action to protest the Rumanian decree which closed 1,602 Baptist churches December 14, according to Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the District Baptist Association.

Dr. Weaver, chairman of the executive committee of the Associated Committees on Public Relations, representing both Northern and Southern Baptists, declared that steps might be taken to picket the Rumanian Legation here, and to hold a protest mass meeting.

The Washington Baptist Ministers Conference, meeting yesterday, approved action by the Southern Baptist executive committee protesting the Rumanian decree to President Roosevelt, and asking the American Minister to report "an account of the persecutions" accompanying the decree. The Rev. Glenn B. Fawcett, East Washington Heights Baptist Church, presided at the meeting held in Calvary Baptist Church.

Fight "Personal Religion"

The District Baptist Convention recently "deplored the situation" in resolutions sent to the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu. Pleas have also been made through the State Department, Federal Council of Churches in America, Baptist World Alliance, Baptist Union of Rumania, and other groups.

Dr. Weaver said that the Rumanian government, headed by Patriarch Christea of the Rumanian Greek Catholic Church, holds that the church and state are identical. The government is opposed to any religious groups which have "a thoroughly personal appeal," Dr. Weaver added. He pointed out that Baptist churches increased from 200 churches and 20,000 members in 1920 to 1,602 churches and 70,000 members in 1938.

Evangelism Forbidden

The growth of the Baptist Church in Rumania, Dr. Weaver maintained, has been voluntary, the Baptists spending only between $6,000 and $12,000 annually on missionary work in that country, with most of the money going to the support of the Theological and Training School.

The decree demands that to be recognized as a religious association, application must be made by church groups having at least 100 members. Because of the predominantly rural nature of the country, only 30 Baptist churches can meet the requirement, Dr. Weaver asserted. The decree also opposes the Baptist doctrine of evangelism, he said, since "religious proselytism, individually or collectively" is forbidden.

Indian Ocean S O S Circles Globe on Navy's Wireless

A plea for aid from a stranded trawler in the South Indian Ocean passed through Naval Communications here yesterday en route almost all the way around the world.

A message from the S. S. Ile Bourbon, reporting it was stranded with 48 persons aboard at St. Paul Island, between Africa and Australia, was received by Chief Pharmacist's Mate Edward R. Gibson on his amateur radio set in Bremerton, Wash.

Gibson forwarded the message to the Navy Department, and naval communications relayed it to the commander of Squadron 40-T, operating in Mediterranean waters—Rear Admiral Henry E. Lackey, on the U. S. S. Omaha.

U. S. Extends New Aid to China In Face of Japan's Protest

Loans

was sometimes referred to as an exchange of gold for silver.

Morgenthau would not say whether all or part of the Chinese gold against which dollar credits will be extended consists of metal sold to the Chinese in exchange for silver.

"That's their business," he said.

The gold is in the New York Federal Reserve Bank, he declared, and is earmarked for account of the Bank of China. The Chinese did not withdraw gold purchased under the exchange agreement.

Officials declared the dollar exchange plan simply permits China to have dollar credits, whenever they are needed to smooth out the trade balance favoring this country, without selling the gold to the Treasury.

Japan May Ask Credit

Such credits, however, must be paid for by future silver purchases or by other means, officials admitted. Otherwise, the gold will revert to the Treasury's account.

In implying that the question of neutrality was not involved, Morgenthau declared "we are simply extending credit to a friendly nation."

Asked whether the Treasury would consider making a loan to Japan, he said:

"Japan is also a friendly nation, and can come in and ask for credit if she wants to."

In a takeoff on the famous "open door" policy in China, he jokingly said his office "door is wide open" to any "friendly nation" which has not violated the Johnson foreign loan act by defaulting on a loan to this government.

Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, recently announced the $25,000,000 loan to China by the Export-Import Bank to buy trucks, gasoline and other "commercial goods" from this country.

Loan Is Protested

It was this loan that drew strong protest from the Japanese foreign minister, Hachiro Arita.

The Export-Import Bank participated in financing the sale to China in June, 1937, of 20 locomotives valued at $1,500,000.

Asked how much gold China had on deposit with the New York Federal Reserve Bank, Morgenthau replied:

"You'll have to ask the Chinese government."

China's silver shipment to this country—the one means whereby China has established credits for purchases—have been running at the rate of about $12,000,000 per month.

Japan's sales of gold to the Treasury—a highly important means of obtaining dollar credits for purchasing war materials to carry on the conquest of China—have aggregated several times this sum each month until recently.

China frequently runs out of dollar credits for making purchases in the uncertain course of the silver sales to the Treasury. Extension of credit against gold to enable the hard-pressed nation to ease over this difficulty permits the Bank of China to retain title to the gold.

"Privileges Must Go"

Tokyo, Dec. 19 (AP).—Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita declared today that privileges Occidentals have enjoyed in China nearly 100 years "must gradually be abolished" under the new order Japan is establishing by conquest.

At the same time he called the action of the United States Export-Import Bank last Thursday in authorizing a $25,000,000 credit for China "an inopportune and regrettable act on the part of the United States, which thus far has acted with understanding."

Arita, in his first press conference since he became foreign minister, said: "It is my belief extraterritoriality must gradually be abolished. In principle, this must also apply to concessions, but that will be a matter of time."

He also declared "some articles of the nine-power pact seem obsolete."

(In a further clarification of Japan's new policy on December 9, Arita was said to have informed the United States and Great Britain the principle of the open door in China had vanished.)

The foreign minister in a prepared statement handed out at the press conference reiterated "the imperious necessity" of establishing a new order in the Far East on the grounds of defense against communism and the necessity to follow "the world-wide tendency" toward economic blocs.

He declared Japan believed "in the principle of equality of commercial opportunity" but said "it is imperative that economic activities of the powers should be subjected to certain restrictions dictated by requirements of national defense and economic security."

Sees War Prolonged

In his comment on the United States credit for China, he said "the loan necessarily will lead to prolongation of the (Chinese-Japanese) conflict and, naturally, to the embarrassment and inconvenience of third powers."

"If, as the United States press reports, it is a political gesture on the part of the United States against Japan," he added, "that would be a very dangerous political gesture."

"Personally, I do not wish to regard this loan as a political gesture," he said.

France Warns She'll Fight to Hold Territory

Won't Yield an Inch, Bonnet Tells Chamber; Confident of British Aid

By John Elliott

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Dec. 19.—France will never yield an inch of territory without fighting, Foreign Minister Bonnet told the Chamber of Deputies today, adding that the warning must be understood as referring not only to Savoy and Corsica but also to Tunisia and French Somaliland. All four of these regions have figured in recent Italian demands on France.

French foreign policy remains based on a close understanding with Great Britain, Bonnet said, and France would give aid with all her armed strength if Britain should become the victim of an unprovoked aggression. France, in a similar situation, would expect the same sort of aid from Britain, he declared.

Defends Pact With Reich

Bonnet praised the Franco-German "no more war" pact which he and German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop signed at Paris two weeks ago. If France and Germany would stand together, he contended, a war in Europe would be impossible. "There is not a Frenchman who does not feel that the peace of Europe would truly be assured if France and Germany succeeded in eliminating every antagonism and every misunderstanding between them," he said.

[The deputies rose unanimously to cheer his words and adopted immediately afterward the foreign ministry budget for 1939, the Associated Press said. It was debate on the appropriation which prompted Bonnet's statement. The foreign ministry budget is for 456,000,000 francs ($11,947,200) as compared with 404,000,000 francs ($10,584,800) last year.—Editor's note.]

Faithful to Non-Intervention

Bonnet's statement indicated a fear Premier Mussolini might think France desired peace at any price, in view of its capitaulation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's demands at the Munich conference over Czecho-Slovakia.

Concerning the Spanish civil war, Bonnet intimated clearly that the French government was adverse to conferring belligerent rights on the insurgents so long as Germans and Italians were retained in the insurgent army.

He said also: "We remain faithful to the principle which inspired the non-intervention policy."

Cold Wave Sweeps Europe, Killing 20

London, Dec. 19 (AP).—Snow and sleet-laden winds swept over Europe today, causing at least 20 deaths and crippling communications on the continent.

Britain, where the mercury fell to 26 degrees Fahrenheit, counted ten dead. Many mines were closed in Cornwall and Wales and Germany experienced its coldest December day in 83 years.

Berlin had a reading of 10 degrees and one person died and many were ill from frost bite at Amsterdam, where 22 degrees was registered. Two persons in Hungary froze to death and two in Poland.

3 Die in Bulgaria

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 19 (AP).—One man in Sofia and two in the provinces were frozen to death today and it was feared at least three sailors had lost their lives in a Black Sea storm.

U.S. Jews Held Exempt From Italian Decrees

The American Embassy in Rome reported to the State Department yesterday that Italy's most recent anti-Jewish property decrees appeared to exempt American Jews.

The United States in the past has insisted that the Italian government put into effect no decree discriminating because of race or creed against Americans resident in Italy. The embassy has standing instructions to protest any decree violating that principle.

American union for distribution among the nations for further study.

Months of Work Fail

The prpoosed pact welded existing peace instruments into one fundamental Pan-American peace constitution and had been put into shape by experts after months of work. It was circulated among the delegations before the conference began.

The committee objected that several new points had been introduced that were not contained in existing peace accords.

The committee also sent a Mexican peace code to the Pan-American union for further study. It was believed the committee took the same action on the United States proposal to avoid choosing between the two.

It was understood a sub-committee on creation of an inter-American court of justice had decided to postpone consideration of the project.

The committee on intellectual cooperation adjourned until tomorrow when the Mexican delegate opposed taking up Cuba's proposed declaration against racial persecution.

Nineteen delegations were reported to favo Bogota, Colombia, for the 1943 Pan-American conference.

Highway Approved

The sub-committee on communications today approved a resolution calling upon governments which have not done so to ratify the convention on the Pan-American highway and to undertake construction as soon as possible.

The highway eventually would permit tourists to drive 10,000 miles from Alaska to Patagonia.

The sub-committee also approved elaborate regulations for inter-American automobile traffic in preparation for the time when the highway is completed, even going so far as to assign license plate letters to the various countries, the letters "USA" being allotted to the United States.

One recommendation urged the governments to confirm the resolution adopted at Montevideo in 1933 providing for a more comprehensive use of five short-wave radio frequencies for inter-American broadcasts.

Norris Opposes Pact

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, an Administration supporter, said yesterday he would oppose entry of the United States into any agreement that would bind this country irrevocably to go to war in defense of any South American country.

Norris said in an interview he favored co-operation with South American nations, "but I am opposed to lending them any money to prepare for war and I am opposed to any agreement that would bind us to go into war to carry out such an agreement.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, observing that there was little doubt in his mind that the United States would fight to preserve the Monroe Doctrine, declared there was "a lot of unnecessary barking" about the possibility of a violation of that doctrine.

"If we consider Japan, Germany and Italy as possible aggressor nations," Nye said, "we have nothing to worry about for the next 100 years."

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, said he believed that American people would be willing to fight for the preservation of the Monroe Doctrine if a clear-cut issue arose.

Flier Rescues 2 Marooned Sailors

Juneau, Alaska, Dec. 19 (AP).—Pilot Sheldon Simmons, who flew from Juneau today to aid 18 survivors of the wrecked motorship Patterson, radioed he had taken aboard his plane two of the seamen needing medical attention.

Leaving a guide, Emile Silvania, at the survivors' camp near Cape Fairweather, Simmons planned to return here with the two men. Silvania will attempt to lead the 16 remaining seamen to a point where they can be picked up by Coast Guard vessels or other planes.

Chamberlain Is Given Vote Of Confidence

London

lain: "A good lord mayor of Birmingham in a lean year."

Of Chamberlain and Daladier at Munich Lloyd George declared: "They both ran away as hard as they could from their obligations, but our Prime Minister, in spite of his more advanced years, kept well ahead. What a magnificent old sprinter he is."

An "Umbrella Statesman"

With a mock show of dissent, Lloyd George quoted Hitler as calling Chamberlain an "umbrella statesman" of the past.

Chamberlain's part in the debate was devoid of dramatics, but he drew a packed audience. Next month he and the foreign secretary, Lord Halifax, are to visit Premier Mussolini in Rome. It is possible they may go on to Germany to see Hitler.

Chamberlain hinted today that he will stay away from Germany until Hitler gives him the desired "sign." He would like Hitler to signify his pacifism by agreeing to reduce armaments and by suspending his anti-British press campaign.

Referring to Germany in friendly terms, Chamberlain said the post-war treatment of the German people by the Allies had been neither generous nor wise. With the passage of time, he said, had come a recognition of the "great qualities" of the Germans and a strong desire to have them co-operate in European civilization.

Says Germany Holds Key

Disclaiming any desire to hamper the German development or "cramp their tremendous vitality as a nation," Chamberlain continued:

"On the contrary, we have the firm conviction that unless this strong and virile people can be induced in partnership with others to improve the general lot, there can be neither peace nor progress in Europe for things that make life worth living."

After declaring Britain's wish to co-operate with Germany and the rest of Europe to remove the menace of war, Chamberlain said:

"I must point out that it is not enough for us to express that desire. It takes two to make an agreement as it takes two to make a war and I am waiting for a sign from those who speak for the German people that they share this desire and that they are prepared to make their contribution to the peace, which would help them as much as it would help us."

Land for Italy an Issue

In view of the forthcoming Chamberlain-Halifax mission to Rome, laborites and liberals pestered the Prime Minister with queries as to whether he intended to "appease Mussolini" with gifts in British Somaliland, in Sudan, or in the shares of the Suez Canal. Although denying reports he contemplated cession of British Somaliland, Chamberlain refused to specify what he may do or say at Rome.

Chamberlain said he and Halifax were not going to Rome with any fixed agenda or with the expectation of reaching any new, specific agreement but for the purpose of improving relations by a "better understanding of one another's points of view."

Texts of Welles' Statement And Lima Tariff Resolution

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday commented as follows on the address of former Gov. Alf M. Landon at the Lima Pan-American conference.

Gov. Landon's able and forthright address is a further gratifying evidence that the peoples of the United States are as one in their determination to uphold the principles of their traditional policy and that in this issue questions of political affiliation do not arise. There can be no question that the people of the United States, like the peoples of other American republics, will refuse to permit any form of outside intervention in the Western Hemisphere.

Furthermore, as we all know, the people of our country in their overwhelming majority demand the continuation of all that is implied by the Good Neighbor policy in the relations between the United States and its 20 neighbors of the New World. That policy is based upon a scrupulous adherence to the principle of non-interference, direct or indirect, on the part of any American republic in the domestic affairs of its neighbors, and upon a frank recognition, not only in word, but in deed, of the complete equality of all of the American republics as sovereign and independent states.

Trade Resolution

At the same time, the State Department made public the text of trade barriers, adopted by the conference. It follows:

Considering,

That the full economic development of nations requires the greatest possible volume of mutually profitable international trade;

That such a volume of trade cannot be developed while excessive barriers exist whether in the form of (a) unreasonably high tariffs; (b) quotas, licenses, exchange controls and other types of quantitative restriction; (c) methods of administering commercial, exchange and monetary policies which impair the maintenance of complete equality of commercial opportunity as between all foreign suppliers;

That all such obstacles to trade create unemployment, lower standards of living, limit opportunities for economic advancement, obstruct the fulfillment of broad social programs, divert trade into uneconomic channels and tend to create international friction and illwill; and

That the American Republics have at previous conferences expressed their support of measures intended to halt further increases in, and to bring about the persistent elimination of, unreasonable and excessive barriers of all kinds to international trade;

Urges 'Reasonable Tariffs'

"The Eighth International Conference of American States resolves:

"1. To reaffirm the declarations of the Seventh Inter-American Conference at Montevideo and Conference for Maintenance of Peace at Buenos Aires calling upon the American Governments to reduce, to the greatest extent found possible, all existing types of restrictions upon international trade;

2. To indorse the negotiation of trade agreements, embodying the principle of equality of treatment, as the most beneficial and effective method of extending and facilitating international trade; and recommends:

1. That the governments of the American republics substitute, as rapidly as possible, reasonable tariffs in lieu of other forms of trade restrictions, inasmuch as experience has shown that such tariffs tend in general to be less restrictive and more susceptible of administration on the basis of most-favored-nation treatment than are any of the other forms of control over trade and payments;

2. That they reduce, by mutual agreement or otherwise, administrative and technical formalities in connection with the importation of goods to the minimum required for the adequate enforcement of the customs laws;

3. That they proceed, as vigorously as possible, with the negotiations of trade agreements, embodying the principle of non-discrimination; and

4. That they make every effort, by whatever appropriate means are open to each of them, to encourage other nations to adopt, in the conduct of their commercial policies, the methods and principles recommended above.

Stay Abreast Of Nazis in Air, U. S. Warned

Civil Aeronautics Aide Cites Airline Gains In South America

Foreign respect for American aviation products must be maintained if aeronautical development and research in the United States is to remain abreast of advances of other countries, G. Grant Mason, member of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, yesterday told a joint meeting of representatives of national aeronautical and civic organizations.

"Aeronautical research and production in Germany already exceed the Reich's needs," he declared, "and the excess planes must be sold in other countries."

Explaining that German lines already have a network of routes in Central and South America, he added that the same condition has been prevented in Mexico only because there are many American planes and technicians there.

Nazi Salesmen Active

Mason declared German salesmen, executives and mechanics are being sent to Latin America to look after German aeronautical interests and equipment there and stated that "these experts recently have gone through schools training them in diplomacy and languages as well as the trade and political theories of the Nazis."

Mayor Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, chairman of the aviation committee of the U. S. Conference of Mayors, urged the meeting to support expansion of Federal participation in the construction and maintenance of airports.

"The cities themselves are unable financially to maintain their present airport facilities or to make necessary extensions," he declared. "Since airports and their operations involve questions of interstate commerce, air mail and national defense, the municipalities and the taxpayers of the individual cities feel they should not be called upon to bear the whole cost of such developments."

Meeting Slated Here

Capt. Gill Robb Wilson, who presided at the meeting, announced that the annual meeting of the Second National Aeronautical Planning Conference will be held here next February.

Others attending the session were Charles F. Horner, president, and John F. Victory, secretary, of the National Aeronautic Association; Edward G. Hamilton, vice president of the Airline Pilots Association; Charles E. Parker, vice president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America; Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors; Charles L. Morris, president of the National Association of State Aviation Officials; John P. Frey, representing the American Federation of Labor; C. H. Warrington, secretary of the Sportsman Pilots Association; Dexter C. Martin, South Carolina director of aviation; Maj. Walter Williams, Tennessee director of aviation; H. C. Whitney Florida director of aviation; Lieut. A. H. Near, president of the Air Reserve Association; Lewin B. Barringer, general manager of the Soaring Society of America; W. W. Brinckerhoff, secretary, and Haven B. Page, general counsel of the Private Fliers Association; William P. Redding, executive secretary of the Interstate Airways Committee; Richard Aldworth, chairman of the aviation committee of the National Exchange Club; Earl Mallory, Washington manager of the American Municipal Association; Emma T. Hahn, of Zonta International; Lewis Breuninger, of Kiwanis International; Alfer L. Wolf, chairman of the aviation committee of the Pennsylvania Bar Association; Wayne Parrish, editor of American Aviation; Elizabeth M. Phillipps, of the Ninety-Nines; E. D. Kirby, of the National Association of Broadcasters; Jerome Lederer, of Aero Insurance Underwriters, and Allen Symthe, of the Aero Club of Washington.

Duce to Triumph Over France in '39, Italian Organ Says

Milan, Dec. 19 (AP).—Italy will win her claims against France before October 28, 1939, the next anniversary of the march on Rome, Relazioni Internazionali, organ of the Institute for Study of International Policy, asserts in the current issue.

"The year XVII of the Fascist era will see the settlement of accounts between Italy and France, and once again life will conquer decadent conservatism," the publication said.

It predicted French rejection of Italian Mediterranean claims and added:

"But France will have a lost cause. No one doubts Italy will enter immediately into action, and with her the (Rome-Berlin) axis. All barriers will be demolished and all obstacles will be surmounted."

Schacht Says Trip To London Opened Emigration Door

Berlin, Dec. 19 (AP).—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, said today on his return from London that he had "developed certain ideas how emigration of Jews from Germany might be facilitated" by the German government.

D. N. B. (German official news agency) said no definite arrangements of any kind, however, had resulted from Dr. Schacht's conversations in London.

He conferred with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and with officials of the intergovernmental committee for refugees.

Schacht's visit was believed, nevertheless, to have paved the way for the committee to negotiate directly with German authorities.

The Hopkins Boom

If he were not politically wise, Secretary Roper would probably be astonished over the importance attached to the selection of his successor. Under the New Deal the Secretaryship of Commerce has not been a major assignment. Several jobs outside of the Cabinet, including the administration of WPA, have involved greater responsibilities. It is the political significance of the appointment soon to be made which is attracting so much attention.

The filling of this post will be regarded as President Roosevelt's real reaction to the November elections. Vice President Garner and other conservative advisers have urged a moderate course now. They wish to conciliate business, to correct legislation that has proved to be defective and to consolidate economic revival. So they are naturally concerned over the character of the Commerce appointment.

For similar strategic reasons the small group of zealots composing the White House inner circle is trying to catapult Harry Hopkins into this position. Mr. Hopkins is a symbol of the spending policy. He is regarded as the leading advocate of that brand of "liberalism" which insists on pushing social reforms without regard to their value, efficiency or probable permanence. Consequently he has become the beneficiary, or victim, of a barrage of propaganda intended to convince the public as well as the President that he should be Secretary of Commerce.

It may be plausibly argued that if Mr. Hopkins is a poor administrator, as the record of the WPA seems to indicate, his transfer to the Department of Commerce would be a net gain. Certainly there is less opportunity for mismanagement in that department than in the WPA. Many critics of the Administration's relief policy would favor the removal of Mr. Hopkins to almost any other post.

As Secretary of Commerce, however, Mr. Hopkins would be out of his field. If he has ever manifested an intelligent interest in the problems of business, it is hard to say when. He would undoubtedly have the confidence of the President in this or any other post. But that advantage might be more than offset if he failed to win the confidence of commercial and industrial groups.

Considering these facts, the clamor for appointment of Mr. Hopkins appears to be almost entirely "palace politics." The spenders hope that if he is taken into the Cabinet he will have a chance for the 1940 Democratic nomination. In the minds of many political leaders that is fanciful as well as wishful reasoning, for nothing Mr. Hopkins can do now will divorce him in the public mind from doctrines to which the electorate is increasingly hostile. Even if the campaign in Mr. Hopkins' behalf should gain strength, a widening of the breach in the Democratic Party would be the chief result to be anticipated.

Take Your Time, Hymen

The experience of Maryland shows how difficult to eradicate, once it becomes established, is the traffic in clandestine or impromptu weddings. At Elkton the marriage racket waxed for 20 years in the very face of scandal. It might even be said to have waxed because of the scandal, since the wide maladvertisement of that otherwise inconspicuous and inoffensive town sufficed to unite the concepts of "elopment" and "Elkton" instantly in the minds of desperate, scatterbrained or gin-fuddled couples.

The reasons why respectable opinion within Maryland, and even with Elkton itself, was for so long helpless to curb the marriage racket, are of course economic. Over and above the annual haul of approximately $8,000 in license fees, the marriage mill brought a specious prosperity to what might be called certain collateral industries—hotels, restaurants, filling stations, road guides and, above all, to the taxicab owners. These became on a small scale something like "vested interests" and as such were able, year after year until this one, to block any effort to reform the law under which they flourished.

Of course, not all, nor even most, Elkton elopements were those of inebriated adults or moonstruck adolescents. Doubtless the marrying parsons there united many couples whose desire for a swift and secret wedding was, from their purely personal standpoint, quite logical and sound. Whether or not the swiftness and secrecy are sound from a social standpoint is quite another matter.

The attempt to set up a marriage mill in Virginia argues a need for uniformity in our marriage laws which now, like our divorce laws, vary so much from State to State. Meanwhile, the City of Alexandria is to be congratulated on having insured its name against connotations that the tiny Scotch village of Gretna Green has not been able to shake off in eighty-odd years.

To Men Of Good Will

There are not many Americans, this Christmas season, who are indifferent to the increasing anguish of their fellow men. There are not many who cannot at least faintly hear the cries of suffering from cities where there is none of the cheerful activity which characterizes our shopping districts now. There are not many, and for this we may be proud, who are easy in their conscience about a holiday which will be so festive here, so grim in many an area where other children could be as happy as our own, were they allowed the chance.

To our people, eager to give aid and yet uncertain of how to help, has come at this psychological moment a man who points the way. It is "to all men of good will" that Ernst Toller, the famous German playwright who is now in Washington, addresses his appeal for practical and immediate assistance to the civilian population of Spain. None can believe that his proposals will fall on barren ground, in this country and at this season.

It is no hasty or undeveloped plan which Mr. Toller, himself a refugee, has brought to this country. Its nonpartisan character is attested by the approval expressed by advocates of both factions in the Spanish civil war. Its urgent need is demonstrated by the appalling reports of malnutrition, disease and actual starvation which are destroying a generation too young to have political beliefs. And the practical nature of the proposed relief program is indicated by the fact that the governments of the Scandinavian and other nations have already approved it in principle and stand ready to lend their aid in practice.

Mr. Toller's plan is actually one of intergovernmental co-operation, for the problem is beyond the scope of purely private initiative. Moreover, the idea really springs from the fact that this and other governments have surplus foodstuffs on their hands at a time when food in adequate quantities is unobtainable in Spain. Little more than the stroke of an official pen is needed to start the transfer of a burdening surplus to places where it will save thousands of lives. But the official action is essential.

There would be no difficulties on the score of distribution. The Society of Friends, long experienced in nonpartisan relief work, is already working on both sides of the Spanish lines and is prepared immediately to enlarge its humane activities. The International Commission for Child Refugees is in a position to co-operate. So are the Red Cross and other relief organizations. The men of good will whom Mr. Toller addresses are ready to move. They will attend to the distribution, in ways approved by both the Barcelona and Burgos authorities, if the food is forthcoming.

And the food is at hand, in gluts and mountains. Next month, in London, an intergovernmental conference will meet for the sole purpose of considering how to dispose of a world wheat surplus of over 1,000,000,000 bushels. In other products—coffee, sugar, fruit, fish and meat—the problem of many nations is how to get rid of unmarketable supplies: If these foodstuffs are not used for saving human life they will be, as they have been and are being, wantonly destroyed.

At the moment Mr. Toller speaks only for Spain. There is, of course, an equal need in China and in other lands where normal economic processes have broken, or are breaking, down. Assistance to Spanish children does not mean the exclusion of others. It means merely the initiation of a practical relief program where there are no real difficulties to its operation and where experience gained could later be used elsewhere.

No action by President Roosevelt would more capture the American imagination, would be less susceptible of reasonable criticism, would do more to vivify the Christmas spirit in a sick and broken world, than a move of definite leadership along the lines which Mr. Toller has suggested.

Foreign Decorations

An almost forgotten clause in the Constitution is recalled by Secretary Ickes' criticism of Americans who accept decorations from dictatorial governments. The Founding Fathers were probably more concerned than we are today over the wooing of citizens by foreign governments through the medium of titles and decorations. But the sound principle they adopted is no less applicable now than it was then.

Titles of nobility have no place in a democracy. Under the rigid restrictions laid down by the Constitution neither the Federal nor State Governments can issue such titles. Nor can any person "holding any office of profit or trust" under the Government accept any "present, emolument, office, or title, of any kind whatever, from any king, prince, or foreign state," unless the consent of Congress is obtained.

While the letter of this provision applies only to officials, its spirit may be readily and properly extended to all citizens. In the larger sense of the word many not in governmental office hold a public "trust," especially in these days of extended governmental activity. Moreover, everyone is a potential officeholder under a government of the people. In short, any decorations by foreign regimes seem to be out of keeping with the American political system.

As Secretary Ickes pointed out, in his customarily dynamic phrases, the acceptance of foreign decorations becomes especially distasteful when they are granted by dictators who hold our own form of government in contempt. Not infrequently titles are bestowed upon citizens of this country in the hope of influencing their attitude toward foreign governments and their policies. In such cases they unquestionably become a pernicious custom.

Under no circumstance should the awarding of scientific or genuine literary honors by national or international organizations be discouraged. Nor would any reasonable person criticize an honorary recognition bestowed by a foreign government for a socially meritorious piece of work. But in these critical days Americans may well be asked to use a greater degree of discretion in acceptance of foreign rewards. Secretary Ickes has rendered a service by bringing the matter to public attention.

No Villain At Lima

In the reports from Lima dealing with the all-important defense problem, there is an obvious tendency to picture the United States and Argentina in the roles of protagonist and antagonist.

Wittingly or unwittingly, the impression is conveyed that the Argentine republic is the villain of the Lima piece, deliberately going out of its way to thwart high-minded efforts by the United States to create in this hemisphere an effective barrier against outside aggression. This tendency to kaleidoscope a very complicated issue into a convenient but wholly misleading formula is as unfortunate as it is misleading.

The fact is that at Lima a considerable diversity of opinion obtains, first as to the degree in which the New World is in danger from ideological penetration and possible military aggression from overseas and, second, as to the measures that should be taken to counteract such dangers.

Some nations seem to favor the creation of an American League of Nations involving a co-ordination of military effort against outside aggression. The other extreme is represented by Argentina, which is anxious to give as little offense as possible to the totalitarian powers. Argentina is more conscious than some of the other Latin-American republics of its commercial and cultural ties with Europe and less fearful than certain of its neighbors of Fascist penetration. The United States happens to occupy a position about midway between these extremes.

In the discussion the United States may be right and Argentina wrong; on this point differences of opinion are both natural and inevitable. But it would be tragic if the good faith of the Buenos Aires government were in any manner impugned. Argentina has an unquestionable right to determine where her best interests lie and to act on the basis of that decision. It is silly to suggest that a refusal to see eye to eye with the United States implies any subordination to the Berlin-Rome axis.

As a matter of fact many other Latin-American nations are more definitely in danger of totalitarian penetration than is the Argentine. That great and progressive republic has successfully absorbed a great variety of racial strains, blending them into a distinct and admirable composite. Its social structure is stable and its credit excellent. If anti-American sentiment exists in the Argentine it is at least partly due to a wholly legitimate grievance over the inexcusable discrimination of our agricultural quarantine regulations.

The need of the day is for better understanding among all the republics of this hemisphere. That is precisely the aim which Secretary Hull and his colleagues have been pursuing at Lima and which the Roosevelt Administration has sought to achieve over a period of years with its "good neighbor" policy. It would be most unfortunate if these highly laudable efforts in the direction of hemisphere amity were spoiled by failure to appreciate that Argentina's motives are just as honorable, and her policy as straightforward, as is the case with us.

'Information, Please'

From the Christian Science Monitor.

The uninstructed may imagine that the free municipal libraries in Britain exist merely to afford facilities for the borrowing, and the study, of books; but this, as appears from the recent annual report of the Croydon librarian, is far from the case. They are not only repositories of information, but purveyors of it. "Inquire Within Upon Everything" is their motto, and any gentleman who wants to know, y'know, has but to plank his poser on the counter, and, be it as obscure and disconcerting as a remark by Mr. F.'s aunt, he will go away a wiser man.

Are the seeds of the monkey-puzzler tree edible? What is the Chados clause? Who was the model for Britannia? It is with such queries, the answers to which are so apt to escape the memory amid the rush of events, that the wise men of Croydon have proved their worth during the past year.

Only once do they seem to have faltered. "Have you anything on scumbling?" is listed in the report as a commercial inquiry; whereas, surely—but scumbling shall pass in silence rather than grumbling be heard. For they, and their fellows, are rendering a great and meritorious service to the public.

"They Do Not Kill"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a pedestrian I wish to register my disapproval of the contemplated ignominy, pedestrian control. In this provincial town there is so much controversy about pedestrians. Of course they violate rules, but they do not kill or maim, as motorists do.

Certainly no place could be more congested with both motorist and pedestrian traffic than is Times Square in New York City between noon and midnight, yet it is handled efficiently, courteously, without ostentation of authority. And I presume accidents compare favorably with those in Washington.

In New York there is a stringent, motorist control, and they respect the rights of pedestrians. Here the motorist who shows consideration to a pedestrian, is so in the minority that he is conspicuous.

There seems to be a strange reluctance to pass more stringent motorist laws, or to install more traffic lights. Perhaps if an analysis was made of each death by traffic of a pedestrian in the last two years, and an unbiased opinion given, conclusions as to who was at fault might change.

The Unsafe Driver

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The National Safety Council announces with some elation that street and highway deaths in motor traffic this year will be 8,500 less than last year. Honest men and women should be warned to pay no attention to this shout of joy over a reduction which still leaves more than 30,000 dead men, women and children for the year. This is simply horrible.

And in Washington I understand much stress is given the more direct inspection of automobiles for mechanical safety. The inspection of automobiles will do only what it does. It will not change the driver.

A car inspected and passed is no safer than a car direct from the factory; a car rebuilt or repaired and put in safe mechanical condition is no better than a brand-new car from the factory. Drivers drive brand-new cars recklessly and incompetently, and the drivers who drive used cars and old cars that way will keep on doing the same kind of driving after the inspection.

An inspected, approved or brand-new car is no safer than the man at the wheel.

This is not to decry the value of car inspection as such. It is merely to remind those who count too much on the safe car that the unsafe driver will always be the cause of the tragedy. And he will never be eliminated until we stop compromising with mayhem and murder and playing politics with privilege.

Sister Cities

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I just want to tell you that I enjoyed very much the piece by Hazel Scaife Detwiler in your Post Impressionist column about sister cities.

What she says about Williamsburg being like a pop-up page in a history book is intriguing—and makes me more ashamed than ever to have lived in Washington for six years without visiting Williamsburg; I have seen her neither with the old face nor the new—but then neither have I seen Richmond or Winchester . . . to say nothing of Charleston or New Orleans. I think of New Orleans as a sort of Virgin Daughter of Babylon that has gone down to sit in the dust but sits there with a dignity and devastating charm.

Come to think of it, it's a quaint and biblical idea to give personalities to cities. Do you know the story of Ahola and Aholibah in one of the books of the Old Testament?

Guessing Game

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Every few years our industrial system gets the jim-jams. Capital flies to cover, factories close and labor goes tramping across the country seeking honest employment and receiving a warm welcome—from militia companies with shotted guns. Cheerful idiots begin to prattle of 'over-production,' the economic M. D.'s to refurbish all the old remedies, from conjure bags to communism. They all know exactly what caused the 'crisis' and what do for it; but despite the doctors the patient usually survives. And the M. D. who succeeds in cramming his pet panacea down its throat claims all the credit for the recovery. We are slowly emerging from the crash and the cuckoos are cock-sure that a country fairly bursting with wealth was saved from the demnition bowwows by the blessed expedient of going into debt."

You will note that the foregoing is quoted and the contributor would like to suggest the heading: "Times Don't Change Very Much," because it is an exact quotation from a speech made more than 43 years ago. Let readers of The Post guess who made it and where.

Consolation Or Catharsis?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest this morning in your columns a letter from Mr. Claus Bogel regarding the Symphony Concert last Wednesday evening.

Mr. Bogel opens a side aisle to a large subject—must the art of music only please, or must the touchstone be: does it say anything or do anything to the listener? The two sides of the question seem to me this: Is art merely the solace and diverison of mankind, or is it an interpretation of life itself?

If it is the latter, as many of us think, it involves more than a succession of pleasing sounds. In the case of Mr. Bogel, according to his own graphic metaphor involving Epsom Salts, the work in question did something to him, proving itself at least vital even if not conforming to his standard of beauty. Mr. Sanders said strongly what he wanted to say, using his own medium. Isn't this reason enough for letting us hear the work, always given the premise indicated in Mr. Bogel's first paragraph, that Kindler is a "music lover and student?"

Statistics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is very unpleasant indeed to criticize those whom generally one admires, but it seems evident that, although quite some time has elapsed since it occurred, very many of your readers are still quite incensed over a statement made by Dr. Gallup. Dr. Gallup stated that in a question between Germany and Soviet Russia, about 83 per cent (if I remember right) of us Americans would side with the Soviets.

It is true that above this strange figure there was a remark stating that one person out of every three refused to take sides. Would it not have been more accurate then to give the following figures: Side with neither, 36 per cent; with Soviets, 53 per cent; with Germany, 11 per cent.

Our professor of statistics at university once said: "Remember that figures are obedient and stupid. Any man knowing how to handle them can make them prove anything he wishes to prove—and call it statistics. An honest and conscientious statistician must, therefore, before setting to work free his mind of any desire to prove the existence of certain tendencies. And the greatest danger that confronts an able statistician is the urge to become a politician instead of remaining an accurate barometer."

Advice For Seventy-Sixth Congress

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Seventy-sixth Congress will meet shortly and, acording to Hoyle, the members, old and new, will be on the lookout for warning signals from party leaders and will read all the political weather forecasts they can get their hands on; and all this bother about two new Cabinet members, the lambasting of Ickes and Hopkins and Wallace, the watching of Jack Garner's poker face and the indulging in other American pastimes like ganging-up on the Corcorans and Cohens and Jacksons, the building-up of the Lodges and Tafts, the boosting of the third term, the panning of the Wall Street crowd or the utilities crew—all of this will be just too bad!

For, unless some jolt is given these men of the new Congress, such as was handed the radio audience recently by the young Mr. Welles, this country, according to all indications, is in for a terrible awakening at a date not too remote. Oh, I don't mean that we must listen for bombing planes—not at all! The alarm will be not so melodramatic but it will be, nonetheless, history-making and shattering.

Without intending in any way to take the genial job away from the towncrier with his cry of "ten o'clock and all's well," or steal his lantern while he's trying some doorknobs, this writer would like to substitute for him for this one occasion and try to induce The Post editorial staff to "do their stuff" as they have never done it before and to do it before the new Congress begins to "do things." Let's see what your gifted staff can do:

1. Tell these men that probably what they do before the Seventy-sixth Congress ends will alter the story of the American people to a greater degree than did the acts of the so-called War Congress of the Wilson regime.

2. Tell them that, in all probability, if the President and Secretary Hull could inform them bluntly what they have learned from personal contacts in the last ten days, all thoughts of playing politics or juggling with glass balls would be driven from their minds.

3. Tell them that the people of this land, led by the President, today have need of the support of every man back of them in getting this country ready for—anything! And if the President should sidestep even so lightly, tell them that they, and not the President, will be held responsible for any contretempts arising from their negligence.

4. Tell them that this country is likely to experience an impact and upheaval due to the fast gathering momentum of sinister forces of greed and lust intensified by a monstrous backwash of rancor, resentment and long accumulating hate.

5. Tell them we do not expect them to be Daniel Websters or Patrick Henrys. But we do want them to realize the responsibilities that are theirs at this crucial time; to justify their calling as trustees of what our forefathers gave them to guard, as protectors of the heritage that is our children's and that of our children's children. Tell them we only want them to be honest, faithful and truly representative of the best that America holds dear.

Disenchantment.

SEVERAL DAYS AGO my small daughter and I went to see Santa Claus in one of the department stores. I had some misgivings, but wide-eyed pleadings had their effect. And we stood at the rail and waited our turn while half a dozen other children interviewed the Man in Red with varying degrees of awe, delight and intense bashfulness written on their faces.

The little line moved slowly, but at last my pride and joy was next but one. Then, in one awful moment of over-eagerness, she reached a chubby hand for the flowing beard. "Santa Claus! Santa Claus!" And for added emphasis gave an urgent pull. Six mothers leaned over the rail in agonized anticipation, but the beard clung securely to the venerable chin. We all sighed with deep relief, and after the culprit rejoined me I beat an embarrassed retreat. All's well that ends well, for three years is a credulous age. But the near disaster made me remember my first brush with Santa.

The weekly paper had announced that the good saint would appear in the window of the Racket Store at 2 o'clock on the Saturday before Christmas. My mother was surprisingly reluctant to let me go. Years later I realized that she must have wanted me to keep Santa Claus shining in my imagination, untarnished by concrete reality. But I suppose my disappointment was too much for her, so she promised to take me down.

Going to bed the night before was almost like Christmas Eve. Something magical was in the air, and even my toes were tingling and warm between the cold sheets. The magic was still there the next morning, and the signs and smells about the house all helped build up my atmosphere of anticipation. A tall, spicy-fragrant cedar stood in a corner of the parlor, awaiting its time of blossoming.

In the kitchen, Nannie was moaning Christmas carols while she beat her cake batter. The old-fashioned round sifter seemed suspended in the air between her brown hands as she shook the flour into the bowl. Then she measured the yellow mixture into four round layer cake pans and slipped them into the oven.

Old Aaron brought in a pan full of coconuts he had cracked, and stayed long enough to assure me that it was true that the animals in the barn would drop to their knees at midnight on Christmas Eve. I could see the cow in my mind's eye, bending her knees and sinking down in her stall, although I was not so sure about the mule. There was a donkey in the Bible, for I had seen its picture, and the mule looked very much like it. I asked Aaron about it, and he said that Delly would sho'ly kneel when the time came, so I felt better. Aaron was a preacher on Sundays, and Nannie said he was a good man—a good man.

Nannie slipped me the pieces of coconut as they became too small to grate, so perhaps my lack of appetite at dinner was natural. But I am quite sure that I was too excited and happy to eat. We were going to walk back to town with my father, so I put on my wraps and stood waiting on the front porch for the grown-ups to finish their meal.

Herbert, who lived next door, clumped by in his hunting boots. I asked him if he was on his way down to see Santa Claus, and he called back that he certainly was. He was 16, and an awful tease, but that day I liked everybody. Then I remembered that he worked at the Racket Store on Saturdays. Maybe he would get close enough to Santa Claus to touch him, to talk to him!

Parts of "The Night Before Christmas" kept humming in my head.

"His eyes, how they twinkled! His dimples, how merry!
His cheeks were like roses, his mouth like a cherry . . .

He had a broad face and a little round belly
That shook when he laughed, like a bowl full of jelly."

It was too early for Santa Claus when we reached town, so we went to my father's office to get out of the cold. It was over the bank and across the street from the Racket Store. I usually liked to go to his office and be allowed to peck on the typewriter and swirl around on the swivel chairs, but today I could hardly bear to wait. It was as if something were pressing the breath out of me, and my fingers and toes kept tingling. I tried reading my father's name on the frosted glass window, but it was in backwards, with a queer looking jumble of letters underneath that said "Wal Ta Yenrotta." At last the clock pointed out that it was time to go.

A crowd was waiting in front of the store window, and everyone was happy and friendly. All my friends were there, and good-natured adults pushed us up against the glass. Then Santa Claus stepped out.

All the breath must have left my body for one still moment, and then it came back again, heavily. Something was wrong. Dreadfully wrong. Santa Claus made silly gestures to the crowd, and his grinning face did not belong to my picture at all. His red suit was belted tightly around a large, stuffed middle, but it didn't shake like a bowl full of jelly. And then I saw that he wore a clumping old pair of hunting boots.

I walked home quietly beside my mother, and met the grown-ups' questions with a polite answer that I liked Santa Claus very much. But all the built-up eagerness was gone. Nannie's baking lost its holiday air, and the packages piled up in the parlor were just a lot of boxes. I didn't find Christmas again until the morning of the 25th, when I awoke and discovered that Santa Claus—the real Santa Claus, had actually been there!

Revelations?

A RELEASE FROM the writers' project of the WPA tells us that the 1939 almanac for New Yorkers, just published by this agency, contains the information that a gun is called a roscoe in the slang of the New York underworld, that a girl is called a twist, that a crook who introduces an unfortunate victim to a gang is called a steerer and that a knife is called a chiv.

PEGLER

Unfortunately, the release was not accompanied by a copy of the almanac itself, so I am unable to say whether this helpful publication tells the meaning of the term 23-skiddo, but from the samples given in the mimeographed teaser I would guess that it does. It is thoroughly up-to-date as of the year 1910 and may be helpful to literary archeologists as a glossary of the obsolete.

IT HAS BEEN so long since a gun was called a roscoe that those who have an ear for the spoken tongue of this country associate the term with button shoes, pegtop pants, the pork pie hat and the reign of the big three in football. True, the gun was once called a roscoe, but that was long before it was called a rod, a term which gave way to the more poetic form equalizer, which, in turn, was challenged by the word manhood. This last was slightly awkward but full of meaning to some. It conveyed the idea that a man was not a man without his gun, but with it he was somebody. It didn't have much of a run, but the word heater made good for a while, and in Chicago the term blast furnace or just furnace was used to identify the sawed-off shotgun, obviously because this weapon emitted a blurt of flame and powder ash. I just assume that, however, because I never saw a furnace fired.

A gun also was known as the difference and may still be so called, denoting the margin of power and courage between the man who had one and the man unarmed. And, of course, everyone has heard a gun called a gat, after the gatling gun, but this one was so heavily overdone by fictioneers writing of the underworld and in comic strips of the Dauntless Dave type that it came to have a false and pretentious sound, like scram.

THE WORD TWIST, for girl, never has been current in this country. Our underworld slang is not confined to the underworld, anyway, but seeps into the language of the people who affect slang which they think picturesque and presently find themselves using it without deliberation. Girls have been called wrens, chickens, dolls, broads and a number of other things in the American tongue, but the word twist is an import, said to have come from Australia by the way of San Francisco, and is an abbreviation of "twist and twirl." This Australian lingo still comes to life in print now and again, but never has been spoken to any extent except self-consciously by individuals who were trying to be excessively picturesque.

It requires a diligent memory course and lacks the one indispensable requirement of vital slang. It is not instantly plain, but must be puzzled out. Mr. Hype Igoe, the boxing writer, is an authority on the Australian lingo and has printed a rather extensive vocabulary at times, and the late Tad Dorgan used bits of it occasionally in his cartoons. Hype and Tad both came from San Francisco.

THE WORD STEERER seems to be an old Western and if it is being used in New York now it is playing a revival. I think there was a Western melodrama a long time ago called "The Bunco Steerer." Nowadays—and even these terms are old—a steerer would be called a shill or capper. I suppose there are those who call a knife a chiv. There is no law against it, but neither does it need translation in a book at public expense, being of about the same value in ---uage as the word flivver, which I believe was given to the language by T. E. Powers, the Hearst editorial cartoonist a long time ago.

The almanac also tells us that a prison guard is called a screw and that the word jiggers is a cry of alarm denoting the approach of the cops. In fact, it doesn't go that far about the word jiggers, explaining merely that it means look out, but the old phrase "jiggers, the cops," certainly needs no translation to anyone who was committing juvenile mischief in the alleys of the United States as far back as 40 years ago.

I don't want to seem saucy, but I think such a book, at public expense, is just sheer bunkum, to use a slang expression.

However—easy go.

Writer to Entertain Child Art Students

Mrs. Eva Knox Evans, author of "Jerome Anthony" and other children's books, will tell Christmas stories to the pupils of WPA art classes of the Children's Federal Art Gallery at a party at 3:30 p. m. today at the Gallery.

Mickey Mouse movies, contributed by Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, will be shown. Later the children will sing Christmas carols.

The Cultural Invasion

Beginning next month, Americans will be taught Japanese flower-arrangement and Nippon culture by mail, according to a plan sponsored by the Central Federation of Japanese Culture. Mrs. Hazel Gorham, who conceived the idea during the trip she recently completed in the United States, will be in charge.

Tentative plans call for the organization of a culture club, with branches throughout the United States. The first step will be organization of the interested women to whom Mrs. Josui Oshikawa and Mrs. Gorham talked in their extended lecture tour on flower-arrangement early this year.

The initial lessons, prepared by Mrs. Oshikawa, will be on flower-arrangement. Diagrams, photographs and directions will go with them, according to a representative of the cultural group.

. . . To answer the remarks of some foreigners that only Japanese materials are suitable and that these in turn are unobtainable in the West, Mrs. Oshikawa plans to use common American vases and other holders which she obtained during her trip."

'A Beautiful Spirit'

Chief Justice Hughes On Cardozo

(Following are the main portions of the address given yesterday by the Chief Justice in response to the presentation by Attorney General Cummings of the resolutions adopted by the bar in memory of Mr. Justice Cardozo.)

IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT to find a life so completely and uninterruptedly devoted to pursuits congenial to talent. While enjoying the resources and interests of a cultivated taste, it was to the study of the law—its learning, its processes, and its adjustments—that he bent his energies and he reaped the hard-won rewards of the most distinguished scholarship.

He was singularly immune from either the enticements or the demands of activities foreign to strictly professional labors. He did not seek public office. He stood aloof from politics. He did not engage in public controversies or aspire to leadership in organized social efforts. He did not crusade for social reforms. His zeal for human betterment took a direction better suited to his temperament and intellectual interests. He shrank from promiscuous contacts, finding a safe refuge in his books.

Even at the bar he was spared the stormy conflicts of jury trials and the contests which evoked passion and animosities. Early distinguished for his ability in analysis and his force and felicity of expression, his professional opportunities lay in briefs and arguments in cases in equity and in appellate courts—in cases requiring particular skill in the illumination and solution of legal problems, where advocacy needed the resources of the industrious scholar. During his 20 or more years at the bar he neither sought nor had public acclaim. But he deeply impressed his brethren of the profession and on that solid reputation his future was built. . . .

His work in the Court of Appeals of New York made him renowned throughout the country. It was service of the highest judicial quality in learning, in skill in exposition, in outstanding contributions to the development of the law. In the field of the common law, his learning gave him the freedom which comes with mastery, as he utilized its processes to secure its intelligent adaptation to the needs of his time. Modest, sensitive and retiring, he was still a mighty warrior for his convictions and in his expert hands the pen became a sword wielded with devastating power.

WHEN MR. JUSTICE HOLMES retired in 1932, the country, led by the bar, with one voice urged his appointment to this court. And here he sat for over five eventful years. In the proceedings which led to the adoption of the resolutions you have presented, Mr. Attorney General, the opinions of Mr. Justice Cardozo—those which he wrote and those in which he concurred—have largely been considered.

This is not a fitting occasion for a critique. It is sufficient to say that no judge ever came to this court more fully equipped by learning, acumen, dialectical skill, and disinterested purpose. He came to us in the full maturity of his extraordinary intellectual power, and no one on this bench has ever served with more untiring industry or more enlightened outlook. The memory of that service and its brilliant achievements will ever be one of the most prized traditions of this tribunal.

MR. JUSTICE CARDOZO was devoted to our form of government and to him our constitutional guarantees of essential liberties constituted a heritage to be defended at all costs. With rare insight into our social problems and with vivid imagination, what he thought and sought to enforce was built upon the foundation of profound study. The idea that "sentiment or benevolence or some vague notion of social welfare becomes the only equipment needed" was an illusion. "Nothing," he said, "can take the place of rigorous and accurate and profound study of the law as already developed by the wisdom of the past." "This," he added, "is the raw material which we are to mould."

That process of "moulding" he not only brilliantly illustrated in his judicial opinions, but he subjected it to the most rigorous analysis. The function of the judge in the shaping of the law was for him a subject of perennial fascination, to which he ever returned with a clarity and comprehensiveness of exposition which placed him in the front rank of writers on the philosophy of law—its nature and its growth.

In his view the competing demands of stability and progress pointed to an essential compromise—"a compromise between paradoxes, between certainty and uncertainty between the literalism that is the exaltation of the written word and the nihilism that is destructive of regularity and order." "The victory," he said, "is not for the partisans of an inflexible logic, nor yet for the levelers of all rule and all precedent, but the victory is for those who shall know how to fuse these two tendencies together in adaptation to an end as yet imperfectly discerned."

For Justice Cardozo, the distrust of a concept was the beginning of wisdom and he was constantly on guard against the "tyranny of labels." With characteristic detachment, he was aware of the snares of "universals," as well in his study of the "theory of juristic method" as in other matters. "The snares that are thus set may catch the heedless feet of thinkers who have been loud even as they stumbled in cries of danger unto others."

And thus he recognized that "Generalizations about the ways in which the judicial process works are quite as likely to be incomplete, and to stand in need of supplement or revision, as the generalizations yielded by the process when in action, the output of its workings."

On the one hand, Justice Cardozo dissented from the "depreciation of order and certainty and rational coherence" as merely negligible goods, and, on the other, he was "wholly one" with the insistence "that the virtues of symmetry and coherence" can be purchased at too high a price and that law is "a means to an end and not an end in itself." He summed up his teaching and his practice in his heed to the warning that principles and rules and concepts are in many instances but "glimpses of reality" and that there is the need, as he put it, of "reformulating them or at times abandoning them altogether when they stand condemned as mischievous in the social consciousness of the hour."

SUCCESS IN SUCH an effort at interpretation of the social consciousness manifestly would demand a rare equipment of learning, experience and wisdom—a balance of judgment which imperfect knowledge or narrowness of understanding would at once upset. That necessary equipment Mr. Justice Cardozo possessed in a remarkable degree and with his keen awareness he was able to escape the pitfalls into which a lesser mind might easily have stumbled.

Justice Cardozo fully recognized the disagreements among those who had studied the juristic method, whether they prosecuted their studies as detached philosophers or with the aid of experience in the exercise of the judicial function, and in summarizing the conflicting contentions he disclosed his own attitude in these words: "I do not know how it will all end. I know that it has been an interesting time to live in, an interesting time in which to do my little share in translating into law the social and economic forces that throb and clamor for expression. Like any other era of unrest, it has had its pangs of uncertainty, its doubts and hesitation."

And referring to a saying of Bacon, he concluded: "The 'ways' we have to travel nowadays are not flat and plane, if indeed they ever were. They are uphill and downhill with many a signpost that is false and many another that has fallen. . . . If I have not lost the road altogether, if my feet have not sunk in a quagmire of unco-ordinated precedents, I owe it not a little to the signposts and the warnings, the barriers and the bridges, which my study of the judicial process has built along the way." It was under the sway of the convictions produuced by that special study that he wrought out the judicial opinions which constitute his monument.

JUDGE IRVING LEHMAN, of the Court of Appeals of New York, has spoken out of his intimate knowledge of the strong influuence exerted by Cardozo as chief judge of that court. Judge Lehman referred to his vast store of learning, his unflagging industry and his command of the gentle art of persuasion, but far above those he placed the "integrity of his mind," "his complete absorption in his work, his selflessness, his independence restrained by his respect for the opinion of others." These qualities were also outstanding in his work in this Court. In conference, while generally reserved and reticent until it was his duty to speak, he then responded with an unsurpassed clearness and precision in statement. His gentleness and self-restraint, his ineffable charm, combined with his alertness and mental strength, made him a unique personality. With us who had the privilege of daily association there will ever abide the precious memory not only of the work of a great jurist but of companionship with a beautiful spirit, an extraordinary combination of grace and power.

Lima And Monroe

By Barnet Nover

Mr. Landon's Reminder

SOME YEARS AGO it became fashionable to say that the Monroe Doctrine had outlived its usefulness, that the time had come to relegate it to the lumber room of history together with "manifest destiny," "dollar diplomacy" and the "Big Stick."

NOVER

Those were the days when the threat of European aggression in this hemisphere, that had loomed so large in the days of Monroe, ceased having any meaning. In Europe the balance of power was held by nations, notably Great Britain and France, which long ago had foresworn imperialist ambitions in the New World. Their chief desire was to keep what they had. In the Far East, the Washington conference of 1921-22 had legislated what it was hoped would prove a permanent stalemate and the freezing of the status quo.

UNDER THE circumstances, the protecting shelter which the United States had for a century extended over the whole of Latin America appeared no longer necessary. It seemed to many that the Monroe Doctrine was at best a gratuitous insult to nations that felt themselves perfectly capable of looking out for their own defense and, at worst, a cloak for American imperialism.

The latter charge was certainly not without substance. The Monroe Doctrine in the course of time had acquired a number of corollaries used to justify American intervention in the affairs of Caribbean and Central American states. Having kept Europe out of this hemisphere, the Monroe Doctrine, it was charged, was being used to make the entire region south of the Rio Grande the private preserve of Uncle Sam.

No wonder, then, that while in this country the Monroe Doctrine remained an article of faith in other countries it was anathema.

BEGINNING IN THE latter years of the Coolidge Administration and gaining force in the Administrations that followed, the Monroe Doctrine was stripped gradually of its more obnoxious connotations.

We stopped intervening in Central America and the Caribbean. We abandoned the Platt amendment by which Cuba had been tied to our apron strings. We withdrew our Marines from Haiti and Nicaragua. The "big brother" attitude was replaced by the "good-neighbor" policy.

The climax of this development was reached at Buenos Aires two years ago when the United States and the other American republics agreed to consult with one another in the event of a threat of external aggression against any of them. The presumption was that joint consultation would, if necessary, be followed by joint action. The Monroe Doctrine, it was said, had been scrapped by the United States in favor of a program of Pan-American solidarity.

IT NOW APPEARS that the obituaries of the Monroe Doctrine were somewhat premature.

In a radio speed at Lima last Sunday, former Gov. Landon, speaking both as a member of the American delegation and as a leading Republican, stated categorically that the Monroe Doctrine remains today as it has been for 115 years the policy of the United States. And, he added, "This historic policy is not going to be changed no matter what party is in power."

His speech was significant for its timing as for its substance. As an aspect of the defense policy of the United States, the Monroe Doctrine states a truth which would guide this Nation's action even if President Monroe had never sent his famous message to Congress. For just as was the case 115 years ago, the attempt by any European power or group of powers to establish domination in this hemisphere would involve a treaty to our security which the United States could not safely ignore.

BUT WHY STATE the obvious at this time? The answer is to be found in the debates that have raged at Lima on the subject of hemisphere defense. These debates have revealed rather sharp differences of opinion. There is apparently no unanimity as to whether and how the nations of the New World are to act in concert to meet any threat from without. The result may be that the Lima conference will come to an end with little or nothing done to implement the rather vague Buenos Aires mutual consultation pact. Pan Americanism, when put to the test, may prove to be an insubstantial wraith; the centrifugal forces in this hemisphere may be greater than the centripetal, with differences and disagreements overshadowing common aims and common needs.

NOW THIS MIGHT NOT matter if the European balance of power and the Far Eastern balance of power had not been so seriously disturbed by the events of the past few years.

As long as there was no real danger of attack from without, whether in the form of armed invasion or, as is more likely, in the form of an ideological offensive, it made little difference whether New Wold nations acted in concert in matters of defense or not.

But that danger has, since Munich, become very real. With the balance of power in Europe seriously upset by the spectacular rise of Germany and the parallel decline of Great Britain and France, there is no guarantee that this hemisphere will be kept free from the turmoil and chaos that afflicts the overseas world.

As the richest and most powerful nation on the American continent, the United States cannot ignore the situation, whether the danger to our security arising from it is immediate or ultimate.

Two roads are open to us. We can seek the help of the other republics in a joint effort to make this hemisphere secure against attack. Or we must undertake that job alone.

The first alternative demands not only compliance on our part—that is assured—but compliance on the part of our neighbor republics as well. It is their's to choose. But if they refuse, that does not mean the United States can or will neglect the task of defense. We can always go back to the Monroe Doctrine.

In bringing that point home, through the speech of Mr. Landon, the United States has served notice on the Lima conferees that the Monroe Doctrine can be generalized but it will not be scrapped.

500 CCC Boys Leave Camps Here For Christmas

More than 500 of the approximately 1,100 enrollees in the six Civilian Conservation Corps camps in and around Washington will leave tomorrow to spend Christmas with their families—despite the fact that each camp is staging elaborate Christmas parties and 1½ pounds of turkey for each boy, with all the trimmings, will make up the Yuletide dinner for those who remain.

A large majority of the enrollees at present are either 17 or 18 years of age and are spending their first Christmas away from home.

Board to Confer On School Funds

Possibility of obtaining supplementary appropriations for fuel, gas and electricity in the District's public schools, operating under a stringent economy program this year, will be studied tomorrow at the meeting of the Board of Education.

School authorities have repeatedly pointed out that additional funds must be found in order to stay within curtailed appropriations, cut approximately $27,500 below the amount for the last fiscal year. A rider on the 1939 appropriation prevents school authorities from seeking additional funds in deficiency bills to Congress.

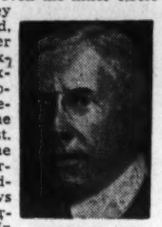
Care Urged In Filling Job

By Mark Sullivan

About Hopkins

WHETHER President Roosevelt will appoint Harry Hopkins to be Secretary of Commerce, nobody knows. Not even the inner circle knows. They wish they did, for the inner circle is extremely anxious that Hopkins be elevated to the Cabinet post. But, in the words of Ernest K. Lindley, who knows the inner circle well, "In the Roosevelt Administration, nothing is settled until the President puts his name on the dotted line."



SULLIVAN

The arguments that New Dealers make for elevating Hopkins are described in the article by Lindley from which I have already quoted. One argument consists of an appeal to businessmen to support Hopkins. It is put thus:

"Mr. Hopkins has the ear and enjoys the confidence of the President . . . If business leaders can persuade Harry Hopkins that this or that needs to be done, they can count on him to do a 'first grade job of 'selling' their recommendation to the President—a far better job than businessmen, individually or collectively could do . . . Because he can speak for the President, as well as to him, businessmen should find him extremely helpful."

THAT IS A CORRECT picture. But is the picture a good one? Should the head of the Department of Commerce be chosen on the basis of his having the ear of the President, rather than on the basis of experience and equipment? Is it wholesome that "businessmen individually and collectively," in order to get the President's consideration of their problems, should need to depend on having as their spokesman an intimate of the President?

Another reason for Hopkins' elevation, as put forward by Lindley, is:

"Harry Hopkins is passionately interested in stimulating economic recovery. He is committed to making the system of private enterprise work."

This statement, or at least the way in which it is put, may encounter some raising of questioning eyebrows. But Mr. Lindley undoubtedly believes it to be true—he is an accurate and conscientious reporter. Possibly it would be desirable to have a careful definition of just what both Mr. Lindley and Mr. Hopkins understand by "the system of private enterprise"—whether they have in mind, now or later, any modifications of the system as it now exists, and whether such modifications could be adopted without making the system unworkable.

BUT I DO NOT WISH to cast undue doubt on Hopkins' belief in private enterprise. In spite of provocative statements he has occasionally made, well-informed Washington does not include Mr. Hopkins among those who would like to see private enterprise ended and collectivism substituted. Well-informed Washington has heard of an occasion when some of the President's advisers counseled that private enterprise be abandoned, and Mr. Hopkins protested vigorously, and successfully.

The next reason for the elevation of Hopkins goes to the heart of what is in the minds of the inner circle:

"As a potential Presidential candidate Hopkins has all the greater interest in both helping economic recovery and in convincing the country that he has a level head. For his chances of becoming a Presidential nominee, which are nil if he remains head of WPA, depend chiefly on whether the President wants him as his successor and is able to nominate him. Mr. Roosevelt's control over his party will depend chiefly on his own popularity in the country, and that in turn will depend very largely on how prosperous the country is in 1940."

IN SHORT, the inner circle wants Mr. Hopkins elevated as a "build-up" toward making him President in 1940. But is this the best reason why a man should be put in charge of all that area of national life that is included in commerce, industry and business?

Finally, it is asserted that Mr. Hopkins "should make a good Secretary of Commerce" because he has "very considerable administrative capacity." As to this, Mr. Hopkins' experience is to be found in "Who's Who," which reads:

"Began as a supervisor Assn. for Improving Condition of Poor; exec. sec. Bd. Child Welfare, 1918-22; div. mgr. New Orleans for Am Red Cross, 1922-24; then asst. dir. Assn. for Improving Condition of the Poor; then dir. New York Tuberculosis and Health Assn."

THAT IS A LAUDABLE CAREER—men who follow it are the salt of the earth, a priesthood of benevolence. But does it equip Mr. Hopkins to be the best possible man for Secretary of Commerce?

What this country needs, desperately needs, is industrial recovery. There are men who know how to bring recovery about, men whose life-long experience equips them to achieve recovery, men whose very names would carry stimulation and cheer to the whole country. Mr. Roosevelt can easily find such men among those who are Democrats and who sympathize with the purposes of the New Deal. If Mr. Roosevelt passes these men over and appoints Hopkins, the effect on the country, instead of stimulation to recovery, is likely to be a feeling that the President has given business and industry a kick in the pants.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The First Line And Preparedness For War

SEVERAL COMMENTATORS have undertaken to say how many warships and what kind, how many more regular troops and how many more National Guardsmen, and how many planes for the Army and how many for the Navy, are immediately required. Estimates of this kind are, I venture to think, highly misleading. By placing the emphasis on what are supposed to be the immediate requirements, they obscure and neglect the real needs of the national defense.

LIPPMANN

For when we speak of our immediate requirements we mean a navy actually afloat, and an army actually in uniform and under arms, sufficient to keep an enemy from attacking the United States or its vital outposts at Hawaii and Panama. For that mission the existing armament program must be very nearly adequate. It is adequate, that is to say, to keep an enemy at arm's length for some considerable period of time. But no military force we now possess, and none that could or would now be established, is even remotely adequate to insure our victory in a great war. And so, if our immediate requirements do not call for any spectacular increase in actual armaments, our requirements in case of war would call for the enlargement of the fighting forces and the production of armaments on a gigantic scale.

THE REAL PROBLEM of national defense today has very little to do with our peace-time Navy and Army. The problem is to prepare now so that, if war comes, we shall without unnecessary loss of time, and therefore without useless loss of lives and of money, be able to mobilize our whole national strength. If we can do that promptly and efficiently, no nation and no probable combination of nations could prevail against the matchless resources of this Nation; if it is clear in advance that we are ready and willing to mobilize our whole national strength, it is unlikely that any nation will challenge us. But if we are not ready to mobilize our reserves, if it is evident that it would take two or three years of muddle before we could make our potential strength effective, then no navy we can now build, however good, will give us real security.

In discussing this matter we have a right to assume that the first line of our defense is adequate, or so nearly adequate that with modest additional appropriations it will be as adequate as we can hope to make it. What needs our undivided attention, and a national effort that transcends all politics and all parties, is preparation now to organize in time of war for the full mobilization of American reserves.

FOR WE MUST REALIZE that if the emergency comes, we shall not be able to order ships, planes, and guns as we might order a new automobile. We shall find, as we found in 1917, that before we can produce sufficient armaments we have to produce the plants capable of producing the armaments. Before we can equip the plants, we shall have to make the tools. And if we are to sail the ships, and shoot the guns, and fly the planes, we shall have to train sailors and gunners and aviators, and men to command them, and men to train them. These are the things that cannot be improvised. These are the things that take not weeks but years to create. Plants, machines, tools, skilled workers, technicians, industrial managers, pilots, mechanics to service and repair planes, shipyards, naval bases, officers—these are not to be improvised. Yet in modern warfare, they are all important.

MUCH HAS BEEN SAID recently about the danger of an hysterical armament program. There is such a danger. It is that we shall appropriate for our first line of defense more money than our industrial equipment is now capable of using and then that we shall fail to pay anything like adequate attention to making industry ready to produce in wartime on a much greater scale.

Where we need to put our main emphasis and to invest most of our money is not in battleships but in shipyards that can build battleships, not in planes for next year but in a greatly enlarged airplane industry, not in more soldiers, sailors, and aviators but in the facilities for training soldiers, sailors, and aviators.

In short, it is not the immediate production of armaments from our existing plant that needs special emphasis but the increase of the plant itself out of which, if we have to, much greater armaments can be produced promptly and efficiently. Our problem is not how many arms we must have now, but how we may become fully armed in time of war.

Roosevelt Ties Health Plan To Security

Health

the first year, with States required to match some of the Federal funds.

Legislation to be proposed at the coming session will include only the points in the general program regarded as most essential, such as extension of public health activities and maternity and child health services, medical and hospital care for recipients of public assistance and insurance against wage losses.

"This means a lot to the 40,000,000 people who have inadequate or no medical care," Miss Roche declared.

Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior and a member of the health committee, explained some time ago that one-half the cost of the health program would be borne by the Federal Government.

Social security officials indicated the board probably would follow recommendations of the advisory council on major questions. It may add, in its report to Congress, a number of recommendations relative to services other than the old-age plan, particularly formation of and arrangements for joint administration with the States of the social security act.

Indictments Drawn

The Department of Justice is drafting tentative indictments for use by the extraordinary grand jury investigating charges that Group Health Association, Inc., was the victim of a conspiracy in restraint of trade, it was learned yesterday.

The grand jury yesterday began its tenth week of inquiry, under the guidance of four special assistants to the Attorney General, who have been presenting the Government's evidence against the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society.

A report by the grand jury is expected late this week, although it is possible that the final report will not be handed up in District Court until a week from Friday.

G. H. A. charged it was harassed by lawsuits, public condemnation and medical discipline against its staff as a result of a Nation-wide aggression by the A. M. A. The established physicians' organizations, it was charged, brought such pressure on hospitals here that G. H. A. physicians were excluded from them.

Testimony of similar campaigns against group medical units in Chicago, Milwaukee, Los Angeles and other cities was given the grand jurors. The investigation came only after an extensive study of the G. H. A. charges by the Department of Justice staff.

The proposed indictments, it was learned, will be extensive and some sections have been in preparation for weeks. Since all sessions of the grand jury have been hidden by the department in extreme secrecy, it could not be learned whether any counts have been brought to a vote behind the guarded doors of the jury room.

Should the indictments be voted, their presentment in District Court would be the signal for a bitter legal battle over whether the medical profession is a "trade" and whether any boycott or other combination against physicians is a violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

her son James was a member until he resigned to become his father's secretary. Recently he entered the motion picture business.

Her son still owns a block of stock in the insurance firm, Mrs. Roosevelt said, and when he went to the Coast to live, he asked her to represent hi mat board of directors meetings.

Will Receive No Pay

She would receive no money for her work, she insisted, neither would she do anything active in the firm's behalf. She would simply attend meetings occasionally and vote as she thought her son would wish her to. Although she had no technical knowledge of the insurance business, she thought it was obvious that her son trusted her judgment to represent his interests.

People who thought it "outrageous," she continued, for the President's family to do anything to earn money raised the grave question of what rights a President's family had. Only the President was elected to office, she said, not the members of his family. Even though he served but a short time in Washington, if he had young people in the family, those might be the very years in which they should be starting their life work, and restrictions imposed by such critics upon their activities might very well assume severe proportions.

In her own case, she added, when she went to the White House she already had many active interests and many financial obligations built up over a period of years; to give them up would have involved an entire change of relationship with many people and many projects.

Civic Groups Ask Stricter Traffic Rule

Lincoln Park Citizens Favor Greater Power For Director; Control OfPedestrians Backed

Increased powers for the District director of traffic in developing safety measures were urged by one citizens' association last night while another indorsed pedestrian control as a safety measure and called for widening of Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Lincoln Park Citizens

Indorsing a proposal of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, Lincoln Park citizens last night recommended that instead of appointing a District traffic adviser, Traffic Director VanDuzer be given increased authority and personnel to promote an adequate safety program and sufficient funds to conduct a traffic educational campaign.

John Nolen, jr., of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, discussed future plans for the city, emphasizing the eastern section and beautification of East Capitol street.

Six new members were inducted. They are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Rohman, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Missear and Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Bell.

Georgetown Citizens

The Georgetown Citizens Association last night indorsed pedestrian control for the District and partially approved the Commissioners' 14-Point Legislative Plan, to be brought before the coming session of Congress.

At the monthly meeting in St. John's Parish Hall the association voted to support the two-fold pedestrian plan after a talk by Traffic Director VanDuzer, who explained pedestrian control as operated in other cities.

The four points of the proposed legislative plan which were approved are:

An independent Civil Service Commission for the District; power to regulate the number of taxicabs in the District to be given to the Public Utilities Commission; power to regulate operation of street lights also to be given to the Commission; and widening of Wisconsin avenue with the necessary condemnation of land on either side of the highways.

New members elected were David W. Brown, Harry W. Phinney, Mumford Ellis and the Rev. M. Mills Perkins.

Committee chairman named were H. C. Kilpatrick, executive; Elmore T. Burdette, finance, John C. Gartland, commercial interests; Dorsey W. Hyde, publicity; Lieut-Col. Archibald King, legislative; Dr. R. Stephen Hulburt, public health; John Hadley Hoyle, membership; B. H. Meyer, parks and reservations; Prof. Henry W. Draper, schools; Milo H. Brinkley, public utilities; William H. Harrison, police and fire protection; Isaac B. Nordlinger, public improvements, and J. B. Wyckoff, traffic.

Sixteenth Street Heights

Resolutions calling for traffic control lights at Georgia and Alaska avenues, and for additional were adopted last night by the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association, meeting in Shepherd School. Samuel Loveless, head of the membership committee, reported that 120 new members had enrolled in the past two months, raising the total to 350.

Following the business meeting, 150 members participated in a Christmas party. The program included carol singing, led by M. Witters, Mrs. Nell Duree Norris, monologist; Phyllis Schwartz, 12, vocal and piano selections; Miss Audrey Rands, interpretative dance.

Society of Natives

Christmas gifts to be distributed to underprivileged children were collected at the monthly meeting of the Society of Natives last night.

A contribution to be made to the Parent-Teacher Association shoe fund was voted at the meeting which was featured by carol singing by the members.

Rear Admiral Sidney A. Staunton, U. S. N., retired, was taken to the Naval Hospital last night following a heart attack at his home, 1735 N street northwest. He is 88 years old.

Admiral Staunton suffered a "moderately serious" attack, hospital physicians said, and after emergency treatment at his home was admitted to the hospital for observation.

During the Spanish-American War Admiral Staunton served on the staff of the late Rear Admiral Sampson.

Reports showed a membership of 3,078 men and 794 boys, both representing increases over last year.

Job 'Incumbents' Are Defined By Civil Service

The Civil Service Commission yesterday defined the word "incumbent" as applied by the June 24 Executive orders to Federal employes who, on meeting prescribed conditions, will be blanketed into classified civil service February 1. The definition was:

An employe who is on authorized annual or sick leave at the time his position is covered into the classified service; an employe who is actually on duty in the position concerned on January 31 and February 1, 1939; an employe who is on leave without pay or has been placed on furlough, provided that the period of furlough or leave without pay is short and the precise position is being held open for him pending his return to active duty;

That the period or furlongh has a definite terminal date stated in advance, and that at the time the furlough period begins it has been arranged that the employe shall return to the position which will actually be covered in on February 1, and assume active duty and pay status. Also, that the furlough or leave without pay status was not granted in lieu of a dismissal on account of reduction of force or otherwise.

The commission has estimated that 81,000 employes will get civil service status through operation of the orders.

Blauch Flays U. S. Rule of D. C. Schools

Autonomy Principle Mockery, Educator Says; Urges Code to Give Board Power

The Federal Government's aim of local autonomy becomes a mockery in the light of its relation to public education in the District, Dr. Lloyd E. Blauch, principal educational specialist of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, said last night.

"Uncle Sam foots but one-eighth of the District's bill, but insists on dictating how all the money here should be spent," Dr. Blauch told the Monday Evening Club at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest.

Dr. Blauch strongly reiterated the recommendations made by the President's committee recently—that the powers of the Board of Education to regulate and determine school policy be enlarged.

Calls Schools Local Affair

"It seems strange that Congress should want to dictate how the public schools of the District should be operated when these schools are not a national, but a local concern," he said. "Yet we found that the people have very little to say, although they contribute seven-eighths of the funds used to finance the District government."

To remedy the present situation Congress should draft a code of laws which would clearly state the purpose and the system of operation of public education in the District, Dr. Blauch said.

He said the Federal Government has taken the stand of the "Indian giver" in that it gave the Board of Education broad powers under acts of 1906, but has since restricted these powers by numerous pieces of legislation.

Budget System Is Snag

Extension of the board's powers would "act as a deterrent against those who have special axes to grind or who wish to serve their own purposes and would avert useless legislation," Dr. Blauch added.

The primary stumbling block in relation of Congress to District education is the budget procedure under which Congress has power of appropriating funds for each item in the school budget, he declared.

A concise code of law for District schools with power to administer those laws left in the hands of the Board of Education would eliminate "much of the encroachment of the District Commissioners into the activities of the board," Dr. Blauch asserted.

"In no instance has the Federal Government gone so far astray from its principle of local autonomy as it has in the District," he charged.

C. I. O. Group Seeks District WPA Boost

Industrial UnionCouncil Hears Complaints of Job Benefit Delays

The C. I. O. Industrial Union Council of Washington last night authorized committees to seek enlargement of the District WPA quota, and to study complaints of delay in the payment of unemployment compensation benefits.

Sidney Katz, secretary of the council and chairman of the welfare committee, declared 9,300 persons in the District, certified for WPA jobs, would remain unemployed unless the quota were raised. He pointed out that this eligible list included only persons who exhausted their unemployment compensation.

The council indorsed a resolution calling for higher rates of unemployment compensation, after members of the group said the surplus District compensation fund was showing a steady increase over the volume of paid benefits.

A city-wide committee with representatives from all non-Government C. I. O. locals was authorized to deal with unemployment compensation problems.

The council voted opposition to a proposed District sales tax and urged that tax needs be met through corporate and personal income levies.

Thief Steals 50 Pipes From New Church Organ

Police last night were looking for 58 organ pipes and the thief who stole them from the new organ being installed at Northminster Presbyterian Church, Alaska avenue and Kalmia street northwest.

Report of the theft was made by William F. Laws, of Silver Spring, Md., in charge of the new organ's installation. Police said the pipes were worth $350.

Group Will Aid Refugees And Seek Nazi Goods' Boycott

A proposal to set up an information service here to aid refugees and immigrants was indorsed last night by the Washington Conference on Defense of Minority Groups.

According to the plan the service would give advice on immigration quotas, extension of visas and naturalization to those who have left or who wish to leave a country because of oppression. According to Isador Lubin, Labor Department statistician, who made the proposal, the service also could serve to co-ordinate activities of existing organizations handling refugee problems.

Representatives of more than 30 civic, religious and labor groups at the meeting last night at Calvary Methodist Church formed a permanent organization. The Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, minister of the Foundry Church and chairman of the conference, was elected to the executive committee which also included Dr. J. A. Themper, Miss Alice Barrows, Arthur Stein, Prof. Doxey A. Wilkerson, of Howard University, and Helen Watman.

Until a new title is approved the group will continue under the name of Conference on Defense of Minority groups.

Dr. Harris was empowered last night to set up committees to organize an active boycott of German goods in Washington. The committees will be charged with requesting department stores not to sell German goods, to prepare a list of German-made goods for use of shoppers and to organize a publicity campaign against use of such goods.

Another committee will be delighted to confer with the lawyers' guild on possibilities of inaugurating a governmental embargo on German goods.

Warrants for 400 Speed Business Privilege Permits

More than 30 local business firms applied yesterday for business privilege licenses as District officials began issuance of warrants for arrest of 400 for failure to obtain licenses at beginning of the fiscal year.

A. F. Brooke, administrator of the business privilege tax office, said yesterday his department, co-operating with the corporation counsel, would hasten issuance of warrants for all firms and professional people who have operated since July 1 without proper permits.

Brooke estimated operators of businesses who face prosecution owe the District between $30,000 and $40,000 in taxes. Under the law the operator of a business is liable to a maximum penalty of $300 for each day of operation without license.

7 Thefts Spur Crime War; 40 More Jailed

Storekeeper Beaten Critically; Safe, Bus, Motorist Robbed

District police, working through the night, yesterday seized 40 more suspects in their redoubled efforts to halt a holiday wave of holdups and petty crime.

In the last two days almost 150 persons have been arrested as suspects and most of them still are being held for questioning. Leading the roundup is the police pick-up squad, headed by Lieut. Joe Shimon.

Robber Injures Victim

An elderly market proprietor was critically injured last night when his attempt to foil a holdup resulted in a monkey wrench-meat cleaver battle.

Samuel Okun, 50, of 3200 Warden street northwest, was behind the counter of the Royal Meat Market, 3202 Georgia avenue northwest, when a young colored man stepped in and asked for a pound of beans. As Okun bent down to get them, the customer struck him over the head with a wrench. Dazed, Okun reached for a meat cleaver, but the assailant tore it from his hand and struck Okun with it. Okun's skull was fractured.

Safe crackers escaped with $100 in cash and $200 in checks after looting the strongbox of the Chris F. West Co., Inc., a meat firm, 1900 block of Bladensburg road northwest.

Motorist Held Up.

Two colored men entered the store of Bennie Lerner, 727 Emerson northwest, and escaped with $185. Two other bandits accosted George W. Estler, 53, as he drove his auto out of the garage in the rear of his home, 3664 New Hampshire avenue northwest. One struck him in the face after taking his wallet containing $185.

Floyd Nicholson, Capital Transit bus driver, 437 Fifteenth street northeast, was relieved of $27 by an armed man while his empty bus was parked at Seventh and M streets southeast. Ruth Atwater, 1712 Sixteenth street northwest, and Josephine Bardagallo, 1210 G street northeast, were victims of purse snatchers.

Presbyterian Ministers Hear Dr. James Cantine

The fact that Christianity has made few converts among the Arabs is no criterion of the missionary work, said Dr. James Cantine, founder of the Arabian Mission, in addressing the meeting of the Presbyterian Ministers Association of Washington and Vicinity yesterday at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The speaker, who spent 40 years in the Near East and organized the United Mission in Mesopotamia, said the work should be judged by the impact which Christianity has made upon Mohammedans as a whole.

Infant Death Rate Here Cut 50% Since '08

Contagious Diseases Similarly Decline, Health Report Shows

Although the population of the District has nearly doubled in the past 30 years, the rate of infant mortality and death caused by communicable diseases have been reduced more than 50 per cent, M. P. Izaminger, director of public health instruction, declared last night.

Speaking to the members of the Nineteenth street Baptist Church, Isaminger said the average age of death in 1908 was 38.5 years and that now the average is more than 50 years.

The public health instructor lashed out against various forms of quackery which he said still exists today.

"The person who is informed on health matters and develops a philosophy of health is less likely to fall into the snare of quackery," he said.

In 1908 there were 711 deaths caused by tuberculosis. In 1937 there were 595. The death rate had fallen from 209 per 100,000 population to 95. The population in 1908 was 339,403 as compared with 627,000 today.

There were 1,100 infant deaths in 1908 as compared with 747 last year. Of 936 cases of typhoid fever, 124 died. Last year there were 70 cases of which 12 died.

Smallpox infected 193 persons at that time. For the past several years there have been no cases reported.

The rate of diphtheria deaths has been reduced from 4.6 per 100,000 population to 2.2 since 1908. The birth rate of 1908 was 20.74 per 1,000 population as compared with 19.53 last year.

Isaminger said there were 15 persons, 100 years or over, alive in the District, according to the 1930 census.

Suburbanites Plan Own Sewage Plant

To Build $700,000 Bladensburg Plant; Deal With District Collapsed

Members of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission have voted to build their own sewage treatment plant in Bladensburg at a cost of $700,000, it was revealed yesterday.

Work on the project, financed by public works funds must begin before January 1.

Following months of negotiations with District officials on the advisability of linking the Maryland sewers with the local $4,000,000 plant at Blue Plains, the commission decided on the present plans for reasons of economy.

Survey Conducted

A survey conducted by the District Commissioners estimated the cost of carrying the Maryland sewage to the local plant by way of new and enlarged sewers was in excess of $1,000,000.

The District Commissioners remained steadfast in their original stand that the Maryland people bear the entire expense of piping the sewage to the plant at Blue Plains.

Within the past ten days the Maryland commission began negotiations with the District officials for a reconsideration of their previous offer, but the commissioners told them they had not changed their minds.

Grant for Pollution Work

One of the reasons suggested for last-minute efforts by the commission to open negotiations was the proposed Anacostia River parkway now being developed which is in line with the site of the Bladensburg plant.

PWA recently granted the sanitary commission $440,397 for river pollution work in Prince Georges and Montgomery counties. An additional $538,264 will be raised by the sanitary commission to be applied to this work.

Father Gallagher Talks to K. of C.

A solution to world ills today can be found in the Christian ideals preached in the Bible, the Rev. John P. Gallagher, S. J., assistant pastor of St. Aloysius Church, said last night at the meeting of Washington General Assembly, fourth degree, Knights of Columbus, at the Mayflower Hotel.

War clouds and threats of depression will continue to gather unless the swing away from religion is averted, Father Gallagher warned, urging adherence to the Bible's precepts. Father Gallagher was introduced by Francis A. Mccann, faithful navigator of the assembly.

Symphony Managers Deplore High Taxes

Managers, Meeting Here, Say Wealthy Patrons Cut Contributions

Music and taxes may seem poles apart, but the fact remains that heavy Government taxation is one of the chief causes of headaches among managers of America's leading symphony orchestras.

Not that they are worried about their own taxes—it's the tax burden on their wealthy subsidizers that furrows the brow of men like Arthur Judson, manager of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

Judson and the business directors of 11 other famous American orchestras—including the National Symphony—convened yesterday at the Mayflower to discuss their problems.

They seemed pretty well agreed that high taxes on wealthy patrons were depriving the orchestras of much-needed subsidies.

"No symphony orchestra can exist without a subsidy—even in such a musically conscious city as Cincinnati," declared Edgar Friedlander, manager of the Cincinnati Symphony. "Costs are so high that a complete sell-out still doesn't pay for the concert."

Judson gloomily observed that the Government will probably replace private contributors within a few years—"and you know what that means." He and Henry Voegeli, of the Chicago Symphony, shuddered as they foresaw "politics in music."

But they agreed that the picture has a bright side. Although there has been a tremendous increase in music during the last few years, they declared that America is just at the beginning of its cultural awakening.

Least year, 2,749,200 persons paid admission to the winter season concerts of the leading orchestras, they said. If the summer season were added in, the figure would be doubled, they maintained.

"Symphony orchestras will never die," Judson asserted, "because the people—in ever larger numbers—will want to hear this highest type of music."

New "Dawn Patrol" Is Equal of the First

New Director and Cast Remake 1930 Hit; Newcomer to Get 'Golden Boy' Role; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THOSE who remember the First National production of "The Dawn Patrol," released in 1930—and that should include everyone who saw it—will discover very few changes in the Warner Brothers (First National) new picturization of the same subject, opening Friday of this week on the screen at the Earle Theater. In fact, the veterans among the guys and gals of the drayma desks, who previewed the new release yesterday afternoon, found it to be an almost identical carbon copy of the original. There is a reason for this.

BELL

The new "Dawn Patrol" represents the renewed efforts of many who were concerned in the fashioning of the original production. Both editions of the picture have been sponsored by the same producing company. Both are founded, of course, on John Monk Saunders' story of "The Flight Commander;" both were adapted to the screen by Seton I. Miller and Dan Totheroh. Only the director and the cast are different. The earlier film was directed by Howard Hawks, the present by Edmund Goulding, who a short time ago also directed "White Banners" for the Warners.

The principal roles in the 1930 "Patrol" were played by Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Neil Hamilton, William Janney and Frank McHugh. The present cast is led by Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp and Melville Cooper, with a large number of lesser-known players in support. Insofar as a reasonably vivid memory of the original film play can be trusted, there is no recession in the tremendously moving qualities of a tense and grim drama of a critical period in the World War, as interpreted by its present all-male roster of stars. Since the "Patrol" of eight years ago was one of the most widely acclaimed photoplays of its period, this should be ample evidence that the forthcoming remake also is a superfine screen entertainment.

One of the remarkable aspects of this story of heroism and sacrifice, in both of its manifestations, is that it is able to rivet the attention and and stir the emotions without so much as a suggestion of "love interest" or any feminine touch. "The Dawn Patrol" is one of the few items in the history of the cinema that have been able to exert a universal appeal without recourse to elements of drama generally deemed essential to popular success. The instant production preserves that reputation.

While it is never the intention of this department to accord a screen play a detailed and formal review prior to its presentation on a public screen, it may not be going too far, in this instance, to remark that although Errol Flynn is given stellar billing and bears the brunt of "The Dawn Patrol's" heroics, it is David Niven who comes dangerously near "stealing" the picture.

If you will cast a casual eye over the photographic reproduction of the Messrs. Niven, Flynn and Rathbone in their present roles, appearing on this page, you will observe that all three are admirable selections to protray fighting types on the bombing front. Just look at those clean-cut features, strong chins and powerful jaws. A little more ominous, even, than Dick Barthelmess, Doug Fairbanks and Neil Hamilton. Von Richter and his Flying Circus find that out in the film—and how they find it out!

Mr. Totheroh Has a Background

For the benefit of those who just came in, Dan Totheroh, co-adaptor with Seton I. Miller of Mr. Saunders' story of the Western Front, is the same young man who wrote "Distant Drums," presented in the Belasco Theater some seasons ago with Pauline Lord as star and Beulah Bondi and Arthur Hohl leading the support. He also was the author of "Moor Born," but more recently has devoted his talents to the cinema. "Zoo in Budapest," the best picture Gene Raymond ever had; "The Count of Monte Cristo," "Robin Hood of Eldorado" and "Yellow Dust" are a few of the other pictures in which he has dipped a pen.

The National Theater announces two radio quiz contests to be conducted this week to stimulate interest in the return engagement of Max Gordon's production of Clare Boothe's all-feminine comedy of "The Women," opening on E street with a special Christmas matinee next Monday.

The first contest will be broadcast over Station WMAL tomorrow morning from 10:45 to 11 o'clock. Awards of two seats each for a performance of "The Women" will be made to the first ten contestants. The second competition will be directed toward a selected studio audience of 12 and will be heard over the same station on Friday evening from 7 to 7:30. Winners of first, second and third places in the contest will be given cash awards of $15, $10 and $5, respectively. The remaining nine contestants will be awarded two orchestra seats each to see the attraction at some performance next week.

Both contests will be conducted by Mary Mason, of N. B. C., and the questions will pertain to women famous both locally and nationally. So now you know.

"Escape Me Never," Elisabeth Bergner's screen vehicle adapted from her stage success of the same name, will be revived tomorrow and Thursday as chief feature of the International Cinema Festival bill at the Little Theater. The cast includes Hugh Sinclair, Griffith Jones and Leon Quartermaine, who appeared in the original stage production with the star. The picture was directed by Paul Czinner, who serves in like capacity in the making of all of Miss Bergner's films, he being her husband.

The Kennedy to Snub 'Streamlining'

Following ground-breaking ceremonies last week, actual construction of the Warner Brothers' new Kennedy Theater, located on Kennedy street, between Third and Fourth, now is under way. The construction of the Kennedy was begun as final plans were completed for the opening of another new Warner neighborhood house, the Beverly, at 519 Fifteenth street northeast, on Friday night of this week, December 23.

While both theaters were designed by John Eberson, noted architect, the Kennedy will mark a distinct departure from the usual "streamlined" effects of modern construction. Instead, a modernized colonial motif will be stressed, emphasized particularly in the exterior tapestry brick with limestone trimmings, patterned after the Georgian period of architecture.

It is said that the interior of the Kennedy will be notable for the simplicity of its decorations and the richness of its wall coverings, as well as for its unique lighting fixture, being made from original designs. Seats will be spaced a full 36 inches apart. Several stores will be included in the theater building. It is expected that the Kennedy will be ready for formal dedication early in the spring of 1939.

It seems that John, nee Jules, Garfield will not be chosen for the title role of Columbia's picturization of Clifford Odets' play of "Golden Boy," after all. The present prospect is that some young, unknown Broadway player may soon become another overnight, Hollywood star. The search for a "Golden Boy," so it is reported from Columbia's home lot, now has narrowed down to four young actors, all new to the theater. This was made known by Director Rouben Mamoulian upon his arrival in Hollywood last week from a visit to Broadway. Mamoulian stated that he might go back to New York to make sound and camera tests of the four players before making a final decision, or that all four might be taken to Hollywood for that purpose, if found more feasible. More than 200 aspirants for the part were interviewed by the director during a period of three weeks. But no mention of Mr. Garfield, who would seem to be an ideal selection—if the Warner Brothers would just give the loan the nod.

Hedy Awaits the Arrival of Mother

The only Christmas present Hedy Lamarr wants is to have her mother, Gertrude Kiesler, arrive in Hollywood during the holidays.

For this, alone, Miss Lamarr rushed to completion her new home in Beverly Hills and built in a complete suite for her mother, which will remain unfurnished until the mother's arrival so that she can furnish and decorate it to her own tastes.

Star Has Own Way Of Relaxing

Jeanette MacDonald has hit upon an unusual way to be comfortable while working on a recording stage. Though the star stands before a music rack when singing, between numbers she sits on a high stool, with her feet on the rung of a chair whose back is turned toward her. That's her favorite pose and one of her few idiosyncracies. She has declined all other types of seats.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 19.

F. DONALD COSTER, who killed himself, was responsible for making new law regarding insanity, in the State of New York . . . Justice Ferdinand Pecora, who once prosecuted Coster while he still was Phil Musica, revealed this last night: Musica, working for the district attorney, was placed in the cell next to Hans Schmidt, about to be tried for murdering and dismembering the body of a girl . . . Musica won Schmidt's confidence and persuaded him to interpose a defense of insanity. He procured two books about insanity for Schmidt and induced him to make marginal notations in his own handwriting in the two chapters on "Feigned Insanity."

WHEN SCHMIDT was brought to trial and pleaded insanity, the district attorney convicted him by introducing into evidence those two books, with Schmidt's notations. Musica had delivered those books to the prosecutor . . . Schmidt's attorney appealed, on the ground that a prosecutor's aide had tricked the defendant into interposing a sham defense. Mr. Justice Cardozo wrote the opinion—ruling that when a defendant in a murder trial interposes a sham defense he has had his day in court—and he may not thereafter interpose what he considers to be his true defense.

FRIDAY'S occurrence was not the first time that Musica thought of suicide by shooting as a way out of criminal activities . . . The late police official, Barney Flood—who arrested the Musica family when they were about to sail to Honduras—told this to Pecora: Phil Musica asked the police for permission to speak to his family in the cabin, alone . . . The police consented, but arranged to see and hear all that was happening . . . Phil drew a pistol from a closet in the cabin and offered it to his father. "Write a statement exonerating us and then shoot yourself," he advised. "I promise to take care of the family!"

SOME MONTHS ago Max Spelke, special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, represented a chemist named Roon in an action involving commissions due him from McKesson & Robbins . . . Roon insisted that F. Donald Coster had tried to have him assassinated . . . Spelke subpenaed Coster for examination before trial. Coster was belligerent until Spelke indicated that his next move would be to inspect the company's books to ascertain how much commissions were due . . . Only then did Coster become amenable—and a quick settlement was effected.

COL. AND MRS. CHARLES LINDBERGH autographed her book, "Listen! The Wind," to friends in New York and included a typewritten notation: "Please do not bother to acknowledge" . . . Of the five indictments in the current smuggling cases, the first one to be tried will be the Lauer-Chaperau case . . . Frederick B. Robinson, who resigned as president of C. C. N. Y. this week, is expected to announce his newest enterprise—a newspaper-writing job.

LUPE VELEZ and Peggy Fears have been signed to appear in the next Casa Manana show . . . The Connecticut Nutmeg will move from Stamford. It will be printed and distributed henceforth by the Bridgeport Herald and will be prettied up by a two-color front page.

MABEL BOLL, the Diamond Queen, brought a detective with her to Harry Richman's premiere at the Road-to-Mandalay, to guard the necklace she was wearing . . . The new cafe is New York's most elegant cafe setting, and Richman still proves to be America's foremost night club singer . . . Squadron A polo and dancing has become a threat to cafe attendances.

THE "INFORMATION PLEASE" programs are all spontaneous and completely unrehearsed. After Tuesday's broadcast, F. P. A. sighed: "For a while I was in a trance and started talking to myself." To which Dan Golenpaul, the program's producer, warned: "That's okay—so long as you don't tell yourself, in advance, what you're going to ask yourself."

COMMISSIONER OF INNVESTIGATION HERLANDS now is rechecking evidence given in all unsolved murder cases as well as acquittals for the last five years . . . Phil Holmes, in preparation for his fighter role in the touring "Golden Boy," is training at Luxor gym and is dyeing his hair black . . . The narcotics angle soon will be stressed in the Coster-McKesson, Robbins investigation by the SEC.

Famous Comic 'Comes Back' To Play Self

Lew Fields Recalls Old Days and Long Climb to the Top

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Dec. 19. — Strange things happen in Hollywood, but nothing has been any stranger, perhaps, than the new job of Lew Fields, who is one-half of Weber & Fields, the greatest comic team of the handlebar mustache age.

For 60 years they have been partners, starting at $3 a week cracking jokes at the Chatham Square Museum in New York and rising to wages of $3,000 as stars of their own music hall. They're both old men now, but they both still play occasionally in pictures.

"Fields' current job is in R-K-O's "The Castles" and it's giving him a funny feeling in the pit of his stomach.

"I'm playing myself as I was 27 years ago," he said, smoothing down a dark brown toupee which covered the bald spot time had stamped on his head. "I got this role, of course, because the film is based on the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle.

"What I'm driving at, about its seeming strange, is the fact that shortly before the war Vernon Castle was in my show, 'The Hen Pecks.' Then he ups and marries a girl named Irene Foote, from New Rochelle. She wanted to be an actress, so I gave her a part as a wedding present.

Turned Down a Sensation

"So after awhile they showed me a dance routine they figured out. They said they wanted to do a dance act in my show. And I said:

"'Who wants to see a man dance with his wife?'

"I turned 'em down. They quit me and a year later they were famous. I'm still blushing."

The only consolation Fields has, he said, is the memory of how he and Joe Weber tried their jokes on Tony Pastor and he wrinkled his nose as if he didn't like the odor.

"But he did hire us a few years later and at salaries so high they even made us dizzy," Fields said.

Listening to Lew Fields talk about the old days—not the good old days—makes you glad you're alive in 1938. Let's listen to him:

"In my time laborers started to work at 7 a. m. and knocked off at 7 p. m. Stores opened at 8 and closed at 6. The electric light had been introduced, but only the wealthy could afford it and only the brave would take a chance on it. There was no telephone. The dime museum was the theater of the poor.

"When Joe and I worked at the old Chatham Square for that weekly $3, we did nine shows a day. Our next job was at the Globe Museum.

"The manager offered us $25 a week. It seemed like so much to me that I burst into tears. I was so happy. Joe covered up for me by saying: 'Never mind, Lew, we'll take it until Tony Pastor is ready for us.'

Way Out West in Paterson!

"Later on we went on the road. Our first stop was Paterson, N. J. We thought that was way out West. All our relatives came down to the train to see us off. We took with us enough food to last a week.

"In 1889 Joe and I took our first trip to California. We were eight days in a day coach.

"Joe and I were eight years old when we met at Public School No. 42 on Allen street. We made our first appearance on the stage during amateur night. They rung down the curtin on us. it was so bad. But a kindly manager told us later this had been a mistake and that we really had a great act. He was a great man. Few would be so nice to a couple of urchins like us. His encouragement was what caused us to keep trying. He was responsible for us going from Chatham Square to Times Square. You can walk it in an hour, but it took us 25 years.

"And it took us another 25 years to reach Hollywood in our first picture, 'Friendly Enemies.'

"Fact is, I retired 10 years ago, but when they ask you to play yourself—that's not work, it is?"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 19.—Now that this groaning old year of 1938, with its wailing wall, is about to pass into discard, lets look at the shining faces of the newcomers.

HEDDA HOPPER

We saw but never heard Paulette Goddard until she spoke in "Young in Heart." And now we find her voice matches her face. She won't have to ride to fame as Mrs. Charlie Chaplin. In "Young in Heart" we got Minnie Dupre instead of Maude Adams—Minnie's a knockout and started in pictures young—at 75. They can make up a face to look old but they can never etch the lines that good, clean living puts there. Nor can they give one an understanding heart.

Robert Morley stole every scene he got his face in in "Marie Antoinette." John Garfield swiped the whole picture, "Four Daughters." We know what Hedy Lamarr did in "Algiers." And if Walter Wanger had more faith in her than her own bosses, I doubt if we'd ever have seen her, because Metro was about to drop her. And when they drop you, it's hard to convince another studio that you're good.

Not until Warners had released "Brother Rat" and Eddie Albert had already departed and was in a New York stage play, did they know what a find they had in him. Miliza Korjus all but knocked us out of our seats with her voice and ingratiating naturalness in "The Great Waltz." Danielle Darrieux soared and we're begging for more.

Those who came up into first place but didn't quite reach stardom are Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Ellen Drew, Arleen Wheelan, Richard Carlson, Jeffrie Lynn and the Lane Sisters.

Now let's cast a look over the reigning beauties. Shirley Temple's holding her place, but they'll have to give her better material if she's to stay there. Clark Gable and Myrna Loy remain on the pinnacle because of "Test Pilot."

Mickey Rooney and Spencer Tracy soared. Bob Taylor made greater strides than anyone. Paul Muni, Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy remain great. Gary Cooper, in spite of "Marco Polo" and "The Cowboy and the Lady," remains tops.

Tyrone Power, lucky enough to get some of the greatest acting plums of the century, kept first place. The brothers Barrymore, Jack and Lionel—as usual—are crowding others for first place. Vic MacLaglen and Preston Foster are again leading the parade. Bette Davis still remains, to my way of thinking, the best actress in Hollywood. Jimmie Cagney, Erroll Flynn are right there beside her. Pat O'Brien has a ringside seat, so has Eddie Robinson.

Norma Shearer held her place. Margaret Lindsley, Claude Raines, Marie Wilson, Jane Wyman, Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Frances Dee, Joel McCrea, Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, Elizabeth Patterson, Martha Raye, Lynne Overman, Charles Bickford, Mary Boland, Buck Jones, Harold Lloyd, Charles Ruggles, Barbara Stanwyck dittoed.

Ginger Rogers proved she could stand (or dance) on her own two feet, without benefit of Astaire. Fred needed Ginger's slippers beside him. Claudette Colbert and Carole Lombard kept their fans. Jimmy Stewart is right up there among the leaders—works well in double harness, especially with Ginger Rogers.

Olivia de Havilland held her own, while sister Joan Fontaine went the other way. Mary Astor, the Bennetts, Connie and Joan, Ritz Brothers, Wally Beery, Frank Morgan, Henry Fonda, Ray Milland, Dorothy Lamour, George Raft, Helen Broderick, Edward Everett Horton, Andrea Leeds, Sigrud Gurie held their places.

Joan Crawford slipped badly, but one good picture will bring her back. Bill Powell through "The Baroness and the Butler" and terrific illness lost prestige. Freddie Bartholomew slid, so did Brian Aherne, Ferdinand Gravet, Luise Rainer, Glenda Farrell, Leslie Howard, Anita Louis, the Mauch twins, Wayne Morris and Fred MacMurray. Warner Baxter's taken a back seat, Madeleine Carroll gained nothing. Loretta Young wasn't so impressive, in spite of which she's just turned down a $3,000,000 contract. Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, due to bad stories, are under a slight cloud, minus the sliver lining. Victor Moore slipped right into one of the biggest New York successes—bless his heart!

These made history: Fay Bainter, Charles Boyer, Akim Tamiroff, Donald Crisp, Humphrey Bogart, Claire Trevor, Lee Tracy (but he had to go to England to do it), George Brent, Jean Arthur, Eddie Arnold, Bob Benchley in shorts, Ann Sheridan (because of umph).

Bing Crosby ran on like the brook. Basil Rathbone proved he was a star in "If I Were King." Cary Grant and Irene Dunne are better than ever. Ronnie Colman held his sway. Doug Fairbanks, jr. swung up beside him in "Prisoner of Zenda." Roland Young, Mischa Auer, Gene Lockhart, Reggie Owen, Allan Hale—all grand. Deanna Durbin, three runs, three hits, no errors—and all-time record.

Tobagganed—Mae West Marlene Dietrich, Simon Simone, Sylvia Sidney and Frances Farmer. Kay Francis went under an eclipse. Marx Brothers gave us "Room Service"—but showed us only room for improvement.

I've probably left out some of my best friends, but for the moment these are all I can remember. All in all, 1938 was a pretty grand year for the children of celluloid.

Visitors Find Studio Lot Is Tour of Paris

All Hollywood needs now to compete with Paris for the tourist trade is the Seine River, for acres of space inside the big movie lots today are given over to reproductions of the French capital.

Practically anything you can find in Paris today can be found this moment in Hollywood—plus some things that Paris, itself, doesn't have.

Let's take a tour of Paris—in Hollywood.

On Stage 5 at Paramount is the "Hotel de Navarre," a symphony in red plush upholstery. Probably you won't be able to get a room there, because Jack Benny and his theatrical troupe in "Artists and Models Abroad" are occupying most of the available space.

Just across the way on Stage 7, however, you'll find a typical French apartment house, built for Mary Boland in the same picture.

The International Exposition of 1938, first of the current cycle of world's fairs, has closed in Paris, but it is still running full blast on the Paramount lot, furnishing the background for the adventures of Benny and his crew.

Around the corner is one of those enchanting little sidewalk cafes that dot the boulevards of Paris, and there's even a public station.

And if you're just dying to show those flattering passport photos to somebody, the American Embassy is but a few doors away.

Finally, you can find scattered around other stages a variety of Parisian night life, ranging from the Montmartre cafes to the swankiest night club on the continent.

At the opposite end of the Paramount lot you will find Paris of the fifteenth century, clustered about the medieval Court of Miracles. This hangout of long-dead beggars, thieves and fakers was a major background of the new Frank Lloyd production, "If I Were King," starring Ronald Colman as Francois Villon.

In addition to the Court of Miracles, individual backgrounds in this Paris street include historic St. Benoit Church and part of the church square, the exterior and interior of the Royal Warehouse, the west gates of the city wall and a number of shops.

Why go to Europe?

Well, for one thing, a passport is easier to get than a pass to a movie studio, these days.

No Man's Land

A twentieth-century "No Man's Land"—an exclusive beauty salon—is the background in "Beauty for the Asking," featuring Lucille Ball and Patric Knowles.

Paresis Makes Al Capone Too Mad to Free

Brain Disease Renders Him 'Dangerous Man' One-Fourth of Time

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—District Attorney William J. Campbell reported today the ravages of a brain disease made Al Capone such "a dangerous man" at times that he may be kept in prison until 1943 for treatment. His ten-year term for income-tax evasion expires May 4, 1942, and he then has another 12 months to serve for failing to file tax returns.

Campbell disclosed the former overlord of the underworld was suffering from paresis, a malady marked by the progressive loss of mental and physical power.

Capone was "lucid" about three out of each four weeks, he said, but was irrational about one-fourth of the time.

Will Confer Here

Campbell announced Capone's attorneys and members of his family would confer with Government officials in Washington "this week or next" concerning disposition of the prisoner once dubbed "the world's most notorious gangster."

The district attorney told reporters he discussed Capone's illness in the Capital recently with Assistant Attorney General Brien McMahon and James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Three Alternatives

They informed him, Campbell added, the Government was considering these alternatives:

Keeping Capone in the Alcatraz prison until he serves his full ten-year penitentiary sentence so that treatments can be continued.

Removing him to the Federal hospital for criminals in Springfield, Mo.

It had been expected Capone would be granted time off for good behavior, released from Alcatraz January 19 and brought to Chicago to serve an additional year in the Cook County Jail.

Justice Department officials reported, however, that the 12-month term could be spent in any Federal or local jail the Government chose.

Gov. Nice Indicates He May Save Brown if He Is Satisfied He Is Mentally Unfit; 6 Win Paroles

Baltimore, Dec. 19.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, in announcing six pre-Christmas paroles and sentence reductions today, indicated that he was considering commuting the death sentence of Fred L. Brown for slaying his 17-year-old wife near Cambridge last summer to life imprisonment.

If he commutes the sentence, the Governor said, it will be because I have been advised that Brown is an "incipient paranoiac."

"I should be very reluctant to send to execution a man who is not normal mentally," the Governor declared, "although I shall not hesitate to take the action which I regard my duty."

The Governor said that he had before him a petition asking that Brown's life be spared, signed by all the jurors who found Brown guilty.

He said, however, that he would make no announcement in the Brown case until he has studied additional information which he has requested.

The Governor granted a parole to John Fontana, convicted with three other men in the robbery of a bank at Dundalk and the kidnaping of a policeman in 1933.

The 15-year sentence imposed upon the four previously had been reduced to ten.

Fontana's parole was recommended by two parole commissioners. Those paroled in addition to Fontana were:

Kostas Paxinos, Baltimore City, lottery.

The Governor cut one year off the five-year sentence given William A. Taylor for forgery in Baltimore, in January, 1937.

The Governor, in announcing the paroles, said the public need not fear that he would make wholesale releases from prison before he leaves office.

Chinese Picket 2d Ship at San Francisco

Tie-up Threatens Port Over Vessels Loading Cargoes for Japan

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 19.—Chinese picketing to prevent the shipment of materials to Japan spread tonight to a second ship and was scheduled to extend tomorrow to the offices of Almon Roth, president of the San Francisco Waterfront Employers Association, in protest against what spokesmen asserted was his threat to tie up the port.

Lim P. Lee, publicity director for the United Chinese Societies, and I. B. Tolins, public relations director for the United Committee for the Boycott of Japanese Goods, announced pickets had been assigned to stop longshoremen from loading the English freighter Beckenham which arrived today to load cargo for Japan.

They said a committee representing the two organizations called on Roth late today and Roth threatened to suspend waterfront operations if picket lines were not removed and longshoremen did not return to work immediately.

Formal action by the Waterfront Employers Association awaited a meeting at 10 a. m. tomorrow, when the association's public relations committee will receive a reply from the C. I. O. International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union to the association's demand longshoremen go through picket lines and renew loading of scrap iron for Japan on the Greek freighter Spyros.

Union officials previously said whether longshoremen would go through picket lines was entirely up to them individually.

Roth said today, "the scrap iron is not contraband. If such picket lines are recognized now, they could be extended to include other issues as well, with sad results."

Gloria Baker Wed to Heir Of $9,000,000

Glamour Girl Becomes Topping's Bride in An Orchidaceous Setting

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 19.—Glamorous Gloria Baker and Henry J. (Bob) Topping were married today in a setting of orchids and champagne.

They said their vows under a bell of white roses before an altar of white orchids, carnations and gladioli at the Spanish villa of Mrs. Margaret Emerson, the bride's mother. The Rev. Arthur M. Depew, of the First Christian Church, performed the double-ring ceremony.

After a luncheon and reception for 45 guests the young couple—Mimi is 18 and her husband 24—left for a honeymoon at Cat Cay in the Bahamas, a center for big-game fishing. Next month they will go to Honolulu.

The bride, her wide eyes shining and her dark tresses bound in a veil of lace her mother had worn, had white satin for her wedding dress and white butterfly orchids for her bouquet.

She was given in marriage by her sportsman half-brother, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt. The wife of her other half-brother, Mrs. George Vanderbilt, the former Lucile Parsons, was matron of honor. There were no bridesmaids. Polo-playing Daniel R. Topping was best man for his brother, Dan Topping's wife, the actress Arline Judge, was among the guests.

It was the second marriage for Topping, who in three years will come into a $9,000,000 estate left by his maternal grandfather, Daniel Gray Reid, tin-plate magnate. Topping was divorced at Bridgeport, Conn., last week by Jane Shadduck, blond actress and aviatrix.

The bride, heiress to the patent medicine millions of her late grandfather, Capt. Isaac Emerson, made her debut only last year at a $50,000 party on her mother's Long Island estate.

Pine Disputes Story 2 Men Stole Heavy Safe Alone

District Attorney Pine in the Court of Appeals yesterday disputed the confession of two men indicted for housebreaking and larceny that, without help, they stole a 1,500-pound safe and carried it 50 feet to a stolen truck.

Helped they probably were, Pine said, by Carmen Quantrille and Henry F. Milton, now serving 3-to-15-year prison terms for stealing the safe. Pine opposed any retrial for Quantrille and Milton, asked after the confession of the other two.

The two who confessed, Walter L. Gray, 25, and Charles Smith, 25, were indicted yesterday, with Wilford Hooe, 25, Nokesville, Va., who was implicated. The safe was stolen from the Washington Beef & Provision Co. in September, 1937.

Those indicted were:

Maryland's Oyster Production Slumps

Baltimore, Dec. 19 (AP).—Maryland's oyster production for 1938 is running more than 69,000 bushels behind the 1937 output despite a 25,000-bushel "gold rush" last weekend, the conservation commission reported today.

Commission records showed 1,754,358 bushels taken from State oyster bars so far this season, compared with 1,823,473 bushels produced this time last year.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Promised, Girl Feels Bound to Marry Man She No Longer Loves; Friend Intervenes; Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a sort of third party to the problem which I am about to relate, and your solution of it will be as much of a relief to me as to the two persons immediately concerned. My dearest friend, a girl, feels that she is tied to a young man with whom she thought herself in love last summer. She promised to marry him and feels bound by that promise, despite the fact that she is now certain that she no longer loves him.

She admits that cowardice is more than likely the real reason why she has not told the boy the truth. She also says the boy's mother knows of the promise, and she does not want to hurt her. I have tried to explain to her that when the promise was made, she believed herself in love, but now that her feeling has changed, the promise should be recalled; that it has no basis, that she should not feel bound by it.

I have further explained that she is doing the man a definite injustice in withholding the truth from him, and that if she should marry him without loving him, merely for the purpose of keeping a promise, she would be cheating him and spoiling his life; that such a marriage could only bring unhappiness to both, and would probably end in the divorce court.

But perhaps what I have told her is wrong, and so I am appealing to you for a proper solution of the problem. I would like you to tell me just how to convince her that she is wrong (if you think she is). Thanking you in advance, I am waiting eagerly for an early reply. M. A.

Meaning of Honor

DEAR M. A.: You are speaking from the viewpoints of sound common sense and strict ethical propriety in arguing that the girl should not permit marriage to eventuate in this instance, as the result of a mistaken and impulsively given promise. One assumes that she is animated by considerations of supposed honor, in demonstrating a sacrificial intention to keep that promise in defiance of her innermost feelings. Which brings us immediately to an investigation of the exact meaning and application of "honor."

My dictionary tells me that honor has to do with "high moral worth; integrity, uprightness . . . a nice sense of what is right, just and true, with strict conformity thereto . . ." Obviously, if the girl will bear this definition in mind, she will see that she has a far greater obligation to dissolve the tentative commitment than she has to continue in it. Obviously, she would be acting in a manner that was wrong, unjust and false—to her own nature and to the man—if she were to marry him under the pretense of loving him when she knows, and her intimates know, that she shrinks involuntarily from the thought of giving herself to him. To become his wife, when she feels as she does, would be to enact a most preposterous lie; to fly in the face of upright behavior; to invite a catastrophic disintegration of her mental, spiritual and emotional forces, and very possibly to visit a like disaster upon him.

As I have said in this column time and again, the underlying purpose and real social value of the engagement period is to supply the provisionally contracting parties with needed opportunity for discovering whether or not they are qualified, individually and collectively, to join forces in a life-time partnership. It is a time for soul searching, for a painstaking assessment of personal attitudes and reactions, for deliberate and reflective attention to the possibilities of congenial mutual adaptability or the reverse possibility of fundamental and irreconcilable incompatibility.

When, as in this instance, one person early and independently reaches the conclusion that consummation of the projected union would do violence to his feelings, he has a distinct obligation in conscience to communicate his findings to the other person, and a further obligation, moral and natural in essence, to dissolve the tentative contract. He owes this gesture as much to himself as to society and the other person.

There is nothing in the least noble, admirable or constructive about the attitude of a woman who would marry a man simply because she lacked the courage to tell him she was mistaken in having said she loved him. To withhold the truth for fear of earning the displeasure of the man's mother (which is what this girl really means when she speaks of hesitating to "hurt" the woman) is to fall to an inexcusable depth of cowardice indeed. The truth of the matter is this—if the woman's good opinion is worth having, the girl will receive it in double measure by demonstrating the courage, honesty and wisdom to admit her mistake and retract her promise.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

No season is as exacting of evening fashions as that of Yuletide. For all the varied roles of hostess and dinner guest, the sheer crepe, above, will receive the approval which classically molded gowns always are given. This slim sheath is in warm tones of sunrose, a dusky rosy beige, especially becoming to vivid brunettes and to the prematurely gray. Shrugged shoulders of the wrist-length sleeves contrast with the squared neckline which flows into on intricately draped bodice. Crystal beads flash in geometric designs across the severe skirt

Feet May Be Strengthened, Also Made Better Looking

Care in Babyhood Is Important
Girls Warned Against Wrong Shoes
Barefoot Dancing May Be Helpful

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

"Only 1 per cent of all babies are born with defective feet, but by the time they are old enough to get married 78 per cent of the brides and 49 per cent of the bridegrooms go crippling up to the altar on broken down feet." So reads a statement that I have before me.

It seems very much exaggerated. "Broken-down feet" is a broad term. Foot specialists of all kinds are inclined to think that because a woman wears high heels and thereby has a slight contraction of the toes, she is a chronic cripple. An ideal foot is very hard to find; Trilby's was the only one I ever heard of. But a foot is as good as its ability to do its work, which is true of the heart and a lot of other organs.

Still, the remark calls attention to the importance of foot hygiene in the case of those who have a tendency to flat-foot or some other deficiency.

Dr. George W. Nelson, of Minneapolis, says that there are two critical periods in a girl's development when her feet are in special danger. The first is from 1 to 4 years—the adjustment period; the second is from 11 to 16, when the emotional forces of her life make her want to be beautiful and she buys the wrong kind of shoes.

A great deal can be said in favor of dancing as a good foot exercise at both periods, especially barefoot dancing. In fact, the more the young person is walking, running and playing in bare feet, the better.

Exercises for developing potentially weak feet are:

While sitting on a chair, take a pencil between the big and second toes and write a series of letters on a piece of paper on the floor. This strengthens the muscles which control the arches of the front part of the foot.

Roll a golf ball under the foot while sitting on a chair. Pick up small marbles with the toes, lift them from the floor and put them down again.

Stand in bare feet facing the wall, just far enough away that you have to lose balance to support yourself with the palms of your hands. With feet firmly on the ground push back and forth toward the wall, stretching the tendons of the heels.

On the question of shoes, I think the foot specialists are entirely too harsh. Exaggerated high heels are crippling, but most shoe manufacturers make shoes for women nowadays that do not do any permanent harm. Men are, of course, more fortunate than women so far as shoe styles are concerned, and their footwear is less likely to cause trouble. As for the flat-heeled, broad-toed health shoes recommended for women, I can only repeat what I have said before, that it is up to the foot specialists to design a shoe that will be scenic as well as scientific.

Glamour Girls Of Fiction Take Exercise, Too

But Heroines of Books Excel Us Humans In Determination

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT DID us good to find out from Katherine Brush that the heroines of fiction are human after all. Usually, to hear the authors tell it, these girls never, never have the slightest thing wrong with them and are beautiful at all times—even at 7 o'clock in the morning!

But Miss Brush is a highly original writer who doesn't flinch from the truth that the glamour girl of fiction is apt to have hay fever, be a wee bit bow-legged and probably should wear glasses . . . is older than she admits, and diets and exercises like fury to keep slim . . . and then has to remember to hold her stomach in!

Determined Heroine

Yes, indeed, that did us good! The undiluted truth is that the heroine couldn't be true to life and beautiful unless she did work at it a bit. To me, the most remarkable thing about her is her determination. All the time that she is breaking her heart over a blighted romance—or her neck in a series of breath-taking adventures—she goes right along with the calisthenics and calorie-counting! No wonder there are so many stories with happy endings!

What the average woman needs is some of the fiction heroine's determination. You are apt to think that you were not born with your share of good looks and let it go at that, when by correcting or minimizing your flaws you might pass for a beauty. It is being done every day.

In the first place, all women who stand out from the crowd have better than average posture. When you come to analyze it, good posture goes with the determination it takes to look your best and with the well-toned muscles that come from exercise.

Seeking a Perfect Figure

Doing one thing for your good looks leads to doing another—especially in exercise. As soon as you have a trim waist, you won't be satisfied until your hips are at least passably slim, and the first thing you know you will be aiming for a perfect figure.

The woman who has enough will-power for daily exercise certainly has too much to permit overindulgence in sweets and rich foods. She knows just how many calories she actually needs and that any more will pad her streamlined figure, no matter how much exercise she takes. She never tries to pretend to herself that "an extra dessert won't count this once." She knows it will.

As a rule, however, a beauty program should begin with posture correction, for a swayback or rounded shoulders are not to be minimized. Tomorrow's article deals with one of the most common causes of slumping.

When surrounded with creamed meat, fish or eggs, these cakes make suitable luncheon, supper or dinner cakes.

Winter Fruits Are Best in Puddings

Fruits of winter taste their best served in a steaming pudding. Grapefruit, plentiful and cheap, packed with brown sugar into a baking pan and covered with a light dough turns out pudding ambrosia. Serve hot with cream, a cream almost too thick to pour. Stewed apricots with sherry are good, but apricot sponge is sublime—a perfect dessert to follow a heavy dinner. Tart cooking apples in a Pennsylvania pudding are something for a day when mood and time inspire you to go to extra effort. Grated milk chocolate is scattered over the batter before it is put to bake.

Wedding Announcement

"Did you hear about Julia Whipporwill?"

"No."

"One of her girls—I think it's Jane—anyway it's the middle one, is marrying one of the Van Bing boys."

"Which of the Van Bings?"

"Oh, yes! Bob Van Bing! He married Sadie Juniper."

"No, he's not married at all yet. He's going to marry Jane Whipporwill."

"I didn't mean this boy—I meant his father."

"No, his father's Horace. Don't you know he married into the Tartar family——"

"That's right. It was this boy's grandfather that married Jane Whipporwill——"

"No Jane's the girl that's going to get married now—to Bob Van Bing."

"Say, Bob Van Bing's been dead 20 years——"

"Well, she must be going to marry the grandson then. Anyway, I know she's going to marry a Bob Van Bing."

"Yes, that's the Bob Van Bing family that came down from the Rufus Van Bings."

"Yes, and the Whipporwills came down from the old Cyrus Whipporwills. Now, there was some connection back there with the Van Bings——"

"This is how it was: You see, Bob Van Bing was married three times and had 21 children——"

"No; he's not married yet!"

"I mean the old Bob Van Bing. You see the first time he married a Whipporwill—I think it was Julia Whipporwill——"

"No, Julia's Jane's mother—the girl that's going to marry Bob Van Bing——"

"Well, Bob Van Bing—that is, the old one—married some kind of a Whipporwill, and then the second time he married a Tartar——"

"No, it was Horace Van Bing that married a Tartar."

"Well, anyway, he married somebody, and their son—Horace's father—now, which one of the Van Bing's was he? . . . Oh, yes Archer Van Bing; well, he married Jane Juniper——"

"You mean Sadie Juniper. But it wasn't Archer Van Bing that she married. She was the third wife of Bob Van Bing."

"I thought you said he married Jane Juniper."

"You mean Jane Whipporwill."

"No, that's Julia's girl."

"Well, now, let's get this straight. Just who is Julia's girl marrying?"

"She's marrying one of the Van Bings."

"Oh, yes, Archer Van Bing!"

"No! No! You just said Archer Van Bing was Horace's father. That would make him the grandfather——"

"No; the grandfather is Bob Van Bing. The one that married Sadie Juniper——"

"No, he's marrying Jane Whipporwill."

"I'm talking about the grandfather. He married a Whipporwill——"

"Say, now, wait a minute. Let's get this straight. Just WHO is marrying WHO?"

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 19.

A WEEK AGO Monday I gave a stand-up supper preceding our weekly skating orgy at ye Gay Blades, and the old Murray Hill neighborhood spirit was never better shown than in the resulting feed—which was really first rate, if I say it, as I shouldn't. The main dish was a brace of duck and a pair of pheasant sent all the way from Minnesota by my good friend, Publisher Murphy, of the Minneapolis Tribune.

ALICE HUGHES

This I surrounded with some wild rice, with grapefruit to begin. And my pal, Marion Stephenson, came over lugging a large mess of yellow turnips, and the beauteous Harriet Rivard brought in a high-class pecan pie. Whereupon we all fell to with a will, with my own incomparable Mildred in charge of the kitchen. There were Mel Rivard and Harriet, lovely Frenchy milliner Dache, with her fine husband, Jean Despres, a cosmetics tycoon; and Marion, and Counselor Bob Spellman, and Lester Gaba, the designer who is helping make Hannibal, Mo., more famous, and poor old spouse Hall and myself. The meal was a whopping success in every way, most of the folks going for thirds, especially on the wonderful Minnesota fowl.

But what I liked most about it was the really sweet hometowniness of the shindy, with pals contributing their mites of food and wine to the ensemble, and all present eating heartily, and all dear friends. I want to tell you that it warmed the cockles, whatever they are, of our old hearts. And it is small wonder that when we adjourned to practice La Skate, we huffed and puffed a bit the first few times round. But we did all right on the rink, and I don't know when I have more enjoyed having people in, though I am one of the world's worst hostesses, being in constant agony lest something go sour on the party. But it didn't, and friends and neighbors had a fine time.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We are all dancing away as busy as little ginger rogerses trying to get up on the "Eleanor Glide," named for my columning colleague, Mrs. Roosevelt. She herself describes it as a combo of three dances she knew and liked as a girl, the polka, the mazurka and the old-time, free-swinging barn dance. At one point in the creation all the hoofers stick out their hands and yell "shake." Hmm. Sounds a mite political to me . . . Miss Mayris Chaney, Mrs. R.'s pretty blonde protegee from San Francisco, figured out the new dance and demonstrated it for us reporters with her partner, Edward Fox.

Our town is full of famous checkroom girls, whether for beauty or horsepower, but the one at our Park avenue restaurant, the Marguery, leads them all in usefulness. She sews on buttons or mends torn pockets of the gents' overcoats while they are inside munching. Service, that's we'uns.

The local ladies who want to splurge in Christmas presents for their menfolk often drop into the harberdashery shop on Park avenue run by the Countess Mara. Her stock of hand-loomed linen lawn hankies, scarves and neckties is terrific, and her place is certainly a boon to harassed wives and sweeties. Of course, you can't buy from the countess for peanuts—but where on earth can you?

Tall Girls Have The Best of It, Declares Singer

Rose Bampton Tells How Her Height Became an Asset

"ACT YOUR HEIGHT," is the advice to tall girls of Rose Bampton, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who sang yesterday at Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale at the Mayflower Hotel.

Miss Bampton, now noted for her posture and her chic, told how the seeming handicap of being an overly tall girl had been turned into an asset in her career.

"When I was a young girl, the biggest tragedy in the world was my height," she said. "I was much taller than other girls in my class and it made me feel conspicuous."

Was Ugly Duckling

Everything conspired to keep her unhappy, Miss Bampton explained. In school dramatics she never obtained the coveted parts of "The Fairy Queen" or the frail little heroine; she was always assigned "The Villainous Maiden Aunt" or the low comedy relief of "The Irish Maid."

Short skirts made her long, straight legs look gangling. Slender as a reed, and just about as long, she looked like an awkward colt and was just about as graceful. She eventually cultivated a slouching posture to make her look smaller.

"The first thing that brought me to my senses," said Miss Bampton, "was a picture of myself, and it showed me how ugly my posture was. I began to watch other tall girls and I noticed that many of them cultivated the same round-shouldered slouch. I saw that instead of making a person smaller and less conspicuous, such posture only created a worse impresion."

Inches an Asset

Resigned at last to her height, Miss Bampton decided to stand erect and forget about her size. Then she discovered that her 5 feet 8 inches was more of an asset than she ever imagined it could be. When she entered a room, tall and straight, her personality became a dominating factor. She found that the glances thrown at her height were glances of admiration, that her tall figure was something to be proud of.

Now that Miss Bampton has begun to study fashion and designing as a hobby, she has realized that all the advantages are with the tall woman. Not only can she wear clothes far better, but she has the choice of styles which her shorter sisters can never hope to wear. The tall woman doesn't have to worry about "line." Waistline, hip or shoulder exaggeration are no worries of the woman who measures more than 5 feet 6 inches. She can wear large prints, large furs draped across the shoulders, and bulky, long-haired fur jackets; and she can carry enormous pocketbooks gracefully and wear large picture hats. As final proof, Miss Bampton points out that you never see a clothes model any shorter than 5 feet 6.

Women Wearing Gold Chains on Throats, Wrists

Women are clasping chains around their throats and wrists with unemancipated abandon, according to Charlotte, of Paris. These admit a gay and gala slavery fashion.

Most of the chains so favored are of gold in multistrand effect, the links either gossamer as a sunbeam or massive as the cables of the Queen Mary, for which one especially smart choker is named.

And there's the four-strand combination chain that women are wearing with dark street frocks and country tweeds as well.

In fact, chains bid fair to replace the ubiquitous pearls as part of the smart Parisienne's ensemble and indications are that American women will find the change to the gold standard of fashion value, too.

First Lady's Days Full With Christmas Whirl

'We Who Have Chance to Give Ought to Be Grateful,' Her Reaction to Demands On Her Time for Charity Parties

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor.

EMPHASIZING that "the spirit of Christmas is a giving, not a receiving one," Mrs. Roosevelt at her press conference yesterday further pointed out that "we who have a chance to give ought to be grateful."

This was in answer to a request that she divulge her reactions to the many charity Christmas gatherings she has attended and will attend from now until Saturday night. She said such get-togethers generally made her sad because they covered up "so much that is tragic." On the other hand, she observed, many of them make underprivileged children happy, unless emphasis is placed upon how grateful they should be for what they receive. Stress on points such as that "makes me squirm," she added.

With plans for Christmas celebrations at the White House complete to the last detail Mrs. Roosevelt left yesterday for New York, where today she will help trim the Christmas tree at the Women's Trade Union League. She will be in Hyde Park tomorrow for a party arranged each year for employes at the estate and the next day she will return to New York to do some last-minute Christmas shopping. Friday morning, she will be back at the White House and will be present when members of the Executive Mansion's office force receive their gifts at 11 o'clock.

Arriving Friday afternoon will be most of the guests who are to spend Christmas with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The group will include the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, of New York; his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and their son, Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d, Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt and their two daughters, Sara and Kate; Harry Hooker, of New York; Harry Hopkins and his daughter, Diana. Hall Roosevelt, brother of the First Lady, will join the house party late Saturday.

Friday evening there will be a birthday dinner for James Roosevelt and, before that, the President will find time to read aloud a revised version of "The Christmas Carol," a custom he has observed for many years. Some time in the afternoon or evening, Mrs. Roosevelt will decorate the family Christmas tree, placing the tinsel and bright baubles according to the President's directions. There will be no candles on the tree, although the Chief Executive prefers them. Public opinion, said Mrs. Roosevelt, has dictated that electric lights shall be used for safety at the White House.

"Good-Habits" Gifts To Go in Stockings

One of the busiest days in the First Lady's life will get under way early Saturday morning. She will leave the White House before 9 o'clock to attend a gathering at which Christmas baskets will be distributed. Half an hour later she will be present at a party for underprivileged children in Arlington. At 2 p. m. she will be at headquarters of the Salvation Army, where more Christmas baskets will be given out. Then, back at the White House by 3:30 o'clock, she will be on hand when presents to the household staff of the Executive Mansion are given out from the huge Christmas tree in the east room.

At 5 o'clock she will accompany the President to the ceremony at which the Community Christmas tree is lighted, and afterward she will be off to visit alley trees.

Some time between Friday afternoon and late Saturday night the First Lady will find time to fill stockings for children and adults spending Christmas at the White House. These will be hung on the mantelpiece in the President's bedroom, and will be opened there, early Christmas morning.

In keeping with a custom she has followed for many years, Mrs. Roosevelt will include with the candles and small gifts that go into the stockings a supply of soap and toothbrushes. Even the President will find such presents somewhere between the top and toe of his stocking.

Turkey Twice On Christmas

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt will attend services at St. Thomas' Church Christmas morning and then will have luncheon with other members of their house party. Turkey will be on the table then, as well as at dinner, but for the luncheon the President will carve it especially for the children.

Adults in the party probably will eat their turkey at the Christmas dinner in the evening when guests, in addition to members of the house party, will include the President's uncle, Frederic Delano; the latter's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling; Mrs. Theodore Robinson, of New York, and the latter's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Blaise de Sibour, of Washington.

Meanwhile, in the afternoon, gifts will be distributed from the family Christmas tree, located in the east hall of the second floor, and some time in the day—probably in the morning—there will be telephone conversations between the White House and other sections of the country where children and grandchildren of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are living.

Monday will be a day of rest at the White House. Tuesday, at 11 o'clock, Mrs. Roosevelt will have her next press conference. That same morning her debutante niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, will arrive from Boston and will be feted at a dance given that evening by her aunt.

Preceding the dance there will be a small dinner at which guests will include Miss Ann Grant, of Boston, who will accompany Miss Roosevelt to Washington and will stay at the White House; the debutante's brothers, Henry and Daniel Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt.

January Ball Canceled For Miss Maisie Howard

Due to the serious illness of Mrs. John C. O'Donnell, the ball planned by her brother, Capt. John R. Edie, in honor of Miss Maisie Howard, will not take place.

The party for the debutante had been scheduled for January 2, at Capt. Edie's home on Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Feis to Visit Parents in N. Y.

Accompanied by her small daughter, Felicia, Mrs. Herbert Feis, wife of the economic advisor to the State Department, will leave for New York Saturday to spend the Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stanley Brown, the latter a daughter of the late President Garfield.

Mr. Feis, who accompanied the members of the delegation from the United States to the Pan-American Conference, is now in Lima, Peru.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOT ONLY the youngest chatelaine of a legation or embassy in Washington, Mme. Alexander Loudon, wife of the newly appointed Netherlands Minister, is also one of the prettiest of diplomatic hostesses. She is stall, with blue eyes and long golden hair which she wears in a small knot. She and the Minister have a little five-month-old daughter. Mme. Loudon loves sports, particularly tennis, and also hopes to play some golf in Washington. An American, she is the former Miss Beatrice Cobb.

The Loudon's don't expect to move to the legation until mid-January. Part of the handsome building on Fifteenth street is furnished by the Government, but the Minister is waiting for the arrival of his own belongings to supplement. The Loudons are now staying at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador to France, and daughter of Oei Tyong Ham, sometimes called the Rockefeller of the East," is currently visiting New York. Her husband was Minister to the United States at the age of 27, after he had acquired two degrees from Columbia University, where he belonged to 15 societies, was connected with five college publications, and trained diligently but unsuccessfully for the track team.

Mrs. Koo, who is the Ambassador's second wife, dresses beautifully in silks and brocades cut in the modern style; is very witty, and likes a good time. She is here to spend Christmas with her two sons, one of whom studies at Harvard and the other at Columbia. The embassy here does not believe she will pay Washington a visit.

JAMES ROOSEVELT is expected to do most of his movie work from New York. Mrs. Roosevelt is occupying her famous father-in-law's house there now, and her husband will probably join her shortly.

THE NEWS that Mme. Bonnet has been named one of the world's ten best dressed women interests the many who knew her here when her husband was French Ambassador. Like most smart Frenchwomen, she goes in for lots of black, and while here favored small hats with bright-colored trimming, and low-heeled shoes. She is a spretty as she is chic.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD HISS had with them over Sunday the latter's sister, Cynthia Arden, of New York. She has been playing the part of the hare-lip girl in the production of Tobacco Road for three years now, and says she feels as though she had been born doing it. As she is very pretty, it must take her hours to make up for the part of that unattractive and, to say the least, rather peculiar character.

MR. AND MRS. Creighton Peet have returned after a stay of several weeks in South America. Mr. Peet is secretary of the Maritime Commission and they went down on one of the new boats sponsored by this organization. Mrs. Peet, who is small and slender, with dark curly hair is an excellent skater and looks unusually pretty waltzing around on the ice rink.

WEEK-END NOTES: One of the highlights of Mrs. Roosevelt's annual party for Gridiron Widows are the short after-dinner talks made by celebreties among the guests. The wittiest this year were the stories told by Lady Lindsay and Fannie Hurst. The famous novelist confessed that she had been on the verge of repeating what she said at the last party, until someone at her table reminded her the guests had already heard it. However, she did wear the same dress again, a close-fitting number of ivory velvet with a calla lily on one shoulder.

Robert Hathaways, Serk Rulers, Last Feudal State, to Visit Here

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hathaway, the Seigneur and Dame of the Island of Serk, who arrived last week on the Queen Mary, will come to Washington the latter part of next month.

Mrs. Hathaway will lecture at a meeting of the National Geographic Society on January 27, and she and her husband will be guests of the latter's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway, of Edgemoor, Md.

The Seigneur and Dame of Serk spent the week-end in New York as guests of Mr. Hathaway's mother, Mrs. Charles Hathaway, who entertained at tea for them Friday afternoon. On Sunday the Dame of Serk left for Arizona, where she will visit relatives through the Christmas holidays. Mr. Hathaway, meanwhile, is remaining in New York with his mother.

On January 4 he will meet his wife in Cleveland, where she will give a lecture with motion pictures depicting life on the Island of Serk, sometimes called Sark, lying off the coast of England and the last feudal state in the world. From Cleveland Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway will go to Pittsburgh, where Mrs. Hathaway will give another lecture. Several other talks are tentatively on her schedule, and she may make a quick trip to Canada before coming here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway have visited this country before and have a number of friends in Washington. They are rulers of the Island of Serk, which lies midway between France and England in the English Channel. Serk was made a feudal state by Queen Elizabeth in 1565 under Seigneur de Carteret, and it has remained so to the present day. Mrs. Hathaway inherited the title to the island from her father, the late W. F. Collings, Seigneur of Serk. Mr. Hathaway was born in New Jersey and is a graduate of Yale.

Miss Cynthia Hathaway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hathaway, attended the tea on Friday given in New York by her grandmother for her uncle and aunt. She will come to Washington on Thursday and will be here with her parents through Christmas. Since graduating from Vassar College she has been connected with the Junior Literary Guild.

Miss Margaret Craighill Bows To Capital Society at Tea Dance

Debutante' Holiday Season Opens With Gay Affair at Chevy Chase Club for Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Craighill

The holiday season for debutantes opened with a bang yesterday with the tea dance at the Chevy Chase Club at which Mr. and Mrs. G. Bowdoin Craighill presented their daughter, Miss Margaret Fontaine Craighill, to Capital society.

Christmas is always the gayest time of year for the debs, and on some days this week there are as many as three buds who will make their bows on a single afternoon.

Miss Craighill, a student at Sweet Briar College, arrived recently to spend the holidays with her family. Assisting her yesterday were four of her classmates, the Misses Elizabeth Colley, of Atlanta, Ga.; Laetitia Seibels, of Birmingham, Ala.; Frances Bird, of Valdosta, Ga., and Miss Martha Jean Brooks, of Charlotte, N. C. Several of this year's debutantes were also in the group assisting, including the Misses Mary Jane Rust, Roberta Quirk, Jacqueline Meredith, Anne Underwood and Mimi Worthington.

Several Hundred Attend Event

The club was decorated with masses of chrysanthemums and roses, and dancing took place in the ballroom looking out over a terrace and the golf course. Several hundred younger members of Capital society attended.

The pretty deb wore a gown of lavender slipper satin with a short jacket of velvet in an orchid red shade. She carried a fan of orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Craighill had chosen purple crepe, simply made.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Walter J. Harrison, Mrs. J. Spalding Flannery, Mrs. Basil D. Boteler, Mrs. Lloyd P. Shippen, Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, Mrs. Norman Underwood, Mrs. William Laird Dunlap, jr., Mrs. A. Keith Parris, Mrs. S. Percy Thompson, Miss Susan R. Craighill and Miss Minnie H. Lippitt.

Dinner at Shoreham Follows Debut

Following the tea, Mr. and Mrs. Craighill entertained at a dinner at the Shoreham for the debutante and those assisting her. The young men in the party were Roger Stuart, jr., Harry Morris, Frank Hynson, Edward Alfriend, John Kelly, of Baltimore; Horace Luckett, Daniel Medill, Frederick Fuchs, of Atlanta; Frank Thompson, Lloyd Fletcher, George Gray and G. Bowdoin Cragihill, jr., brother of Miss Craighill.

This particular debutante is a member of the cave-dweller set, her family having been prominent in Georgetown for many generations. Mrs. Craighill is the former Miss Julia Lippitt, and the family residence at 2803 P street is one of the few fine old houses in that section not occupied by newcomers.

Francis Biddles To Spend Holidays In Philadelphia

Mrs. Francis Biddle, widely known as Katherine Garrison Chapin, the poet, has returned to her home in Philadelphia, where she will remain through the Christmas holidays.

On Friday, December 30, her symphonic poem, "Lament for the Stolen," will be presented by a chorus of 250 women's voices in conjunction with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Eugene Ormandy. The poem is now being published by the Centaur Press, Philadelphia.

Mr. Biddle, general counsel for the Congressional Committee investigating the TVA, will join his wife and son in Philadelphia for the holidays. He and his wife will return to Washington early in January.

Auchinclosses to Go To N. Y. for Christmas

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss will spend Christmas Day in New York with the former's mother, Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss.

Dominican Envoy, Departing, Feted

The Assistant Solicitor General, Golden W. Bell, and Mrs. Bell will entertain at dinner this evening in compliment to the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza, who will leave Washington soon.

Guests included the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of El Salvodar and Senora de Castro, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, the Charge d'Affaires of Venezuela and Senora Fombona-Pachana, the Charge d'Affaires of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, Dr. and Mrs. Oscar D. Albertini, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajijas, Dr. and Mrs. William Francis O'Donnell, Dr. and Mrs. Charles McEnerney and Mr. and Mrs. William B. Shearer.

Federation Shuns Peace Parley as Red

Declines Invitation To Name Delegates To Congress to Be Opened Here Jan. 6

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs will take no part in a meeting of the American Congress of Peace and Democracy, scheduled to be held at the Rialto Theater here January 6, 7 and 8.

Action declining the invitation to send delegates to Congress was taken yesterday at the December meeting of the federation, following a discussion in which several members charged that the American League for Peace and Democracy, by which the Congress is sponsored, is communistic in tendency.

The motion to "take no part in the meeting" was made by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, chairman of legislation, after Mrs. George O. Gillingham, chairman of international relations, had reported on receiving the league's invitation and requested instruction as to the federation's attitude. Mrs. Gillingham explained that the announced purpose of the organization as stated in its call was to combat the threat of fascism and "work out a program for the defense of our democracy and for peace."

Mrs. LeVerne Beales Conducts Meeting

Mrs. LeVerne Beales, first vice president, presided at yesterday's meeting, held at the Roosevelt Hotel, in the absence of Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, the president, who was ill. Miss Janet Richards was the speaker and the musical program was arranged by Mrs. Marie Deal, soprano, who is a member of the music committee. Mrs. Deal, accompanied by Mrs. Emory Ozabal, sang "Calm as the Night" (Bohm) and "Christmas Song" (Adams), with violin obligato by Durwood Bowersox. Mr. Bowersox, former member of the National Symphony Orchestra, also played violin solos. Mrs. Eugene Thompson led the salute to the flag with which the program opened.

Miss Richards, in a discussion of the Lima Conference, described conditions which gave rise to the Monroe Doctrine in 1823 and pointed to the fact that they were much the same as those today, when the Western Hemisphere again is threatened by the autocracies of Europe and Asia. "We need the Monroe Doctrine more than ever before," she asserted.

Plan to Remember Veterans at Christmas

Reports of department chairmen included that of Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison who, as chairman of the Department of American citizenship, will go to Walter Reed Hospital Christmas morning, taking gifts for patients which the federation has provided. Various clubs have contributed 165 bedside bags which are included and money was appropriated with which socks, shirts and ties will be bought. The club members also took cigarets to the meeting to be added to other Christmas gifts. Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, chairman of the Veterans' committee which has had charge of the Christmas plans, will be in New York for the holidays.

Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, immediate past president of the District federation and director of the general federation, in her report, urged the need for contributions to the general federation fund.

Luncheon was served between the morning session and the afternoon program on which Miss Richards spoke.

A CHRISTMAS TREE akin to the famous lollypop tree will be provided for children of the Emergency Home of Central Union Mission Thursday evening, when they are entertained by the Junior Guild of the Women's City Club. A party will be given for them at the clubhouse, with entertainment by other children, refreshments and toys distributed by Santa Claus.

Mrs. Edith Petersilia is chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, and Miss Marguerite Griffin is responsible for original decoration on the tree, everything on which will be good to eat.

Little pasteboard men in red, green, yellow, blue and orange suits will have their paper-bag heads full of hard candy. There will also be bright gumdrops on strings and popcorn balls wrapped in cellophane. When the 30 guests have received their candy and popcorn, the tree — like mother Hubbard's cupboard — will be bare.

The members of the guild assisting in plans for the party, met with Miss Griffin last week and spent an evening cutting out the pasteboard men, drawing the details of their suits and making jolly faces for them in colored crayon. The girls resembled a grown-up kindergarten class and enjoyed the preparations as much as they expect the youngsters to enjoy the party.

In the group assisting Mrs. Petersilia and Miss Griffin were Miss Carol Cox, chairman of the guild; Mrs. Margaret Hill, secretary of the club; Miss Mary Shaw, Mrs. James Smith, Miss Hazel Boyer, Miss Martha Benton, and Mrs. William F. Clark.

Miss Marjorie Webster, president of the Women's City Club, will be among those on hand to help, the night of the party.

SANTA has gone Republican this year. On the original Christmas cards Marion E. Martin, vice-chairman of the Republican National Committee, has sent to her friends, he is riding in a sleigh drawn by a triumphant little elephant who is pulling along all of the States which came back into the Republican fold in November.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR ALUMNI COUNCIL of Calvary Baptist Church will have a White Gift Christmas for the Washington Federation of Churches today at the federation headquarters, 1751 N street northwest. All gifts are for the hospital and welfare work of the federation. Mrs. Janie Mallory will preside.

The program will include a carol service, stories of Christmas carols in foreign lands, told by Mrs. Mabel Karol Howard, illustrated by Mrs. Luella Lathrop at the piano.

A social hour will follow the service. A group of songs of other lands will be sung by Mrs. Mildred Moore, soprano, of Tulsa, Okla., and Mrs. Ida Woods, contralto, of Glasgow, Scotland. A special offering will be taken for Christmas welfare work at Calvary Church.

CHRISTMAS PARTIES are keeping members of the P. E. O. Sisterhood busy this week. Tonight two will be given. Chapter O will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Ernest J. Budge, 1425 North Garfield street, Arlington, Va., at a candle-light service and songfest, and Chapter H will meet at the home of its president, Mrs. Rush B. Lincoln, 3601 Hawthorne street, for a Christmas party honoring the B. I. L.'s, who are husbands of the members.

The program at Chapter H's party will be given by Miss Myrtle Barnes, soprano; Miss Evelyn Wells, pianist, and Miss Rosalie Allen.

Tomorrow Mrs. Frank A. Hornady, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Johnson, will entertain members of Chapter A at her home, 1612 Crittenden street.

Carols will be sung by a group of chapter members, Dr. Mary Holmes, Mrs. Thomas Hynson, Mrs. Pauline Hoover, Mrs. Hugh Dryden and Miss Bess Miles. A Christmas story, "The Star of Bethlehem," will be given by the Rev. Orris D. Robinson, pastor of Calvary M. E. Church, and Miss Elizabeth Hancock, as Santa Claus, will distribute gifts.

The chapter at its last meeting voted to contribute toward the Christmas fund of Neighborhood House. Preceding the entertainment, a short business meeting will be held, the president Mrs. Roy A. Potts, presiding.

Chapter G will entertain at a Christmas tea in honor of the District of Columbia State officers and the presidents of the District chapters at the home of the president, Mrs. John A. Smith, 6137 Thirty-third street, Thursday afternoon. Cash donations for Christmas dinners have been sent to Central Union Mission and the Gospel Mission.

Chapter M will hold its annual Christmas party at the home of Mrs. L. F. Rader, 1726 Troy street, Arlington, Thursday at 8 p. m., with Miss Lois Baker and Mrs. T. W. Daly as assistant hostesses. The president, Mrs. R. A. Le Roux, will preside. Members will bring to this meeting articles for a Christmas dinner basket, which will be given to a needy family.

Curley Club Will Hold Christmas Fete Tonight

The Curley Club's annual Christmas Party will take place this evening, after the regular meeting of the club, in the Continental Hotel.

'Christmas Through the Ages' to Be Shown Arts Club Members at Dinner Tonight

"Christmas Through the Ages" will be the subject of the program following the regular Tuesday dinner at the Arts Club this evening. Pictures and legends and traditions will be presented.

Hostesses for the occasion are Miss Caroline B. Sherman and Miss Claribel R. Barnett. The program was selected and arranged by Miss Anne Darlington.

The carols will be sung by the students of MacFarland Junior and Roosevelt High schools under the direction of Mrs. Robert W. Mess. Byzantine hymns will be sung by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dounis, Mrs. Paul George, George Seymour, the Misses Anna Scounas, Amalia Peterson, Helen Fochalis, Catherine Chaconas, Mary Gotsis and Marie Kekiris, and Stephen Kyriazis and James Malis.

The performers will be introduced by Charles Edward Russell, Frank B. Steele, president of the club, and Mrs. Steele will leave tomorrow by motor for New Rochelle, N. Y., to spend Christmas with their daughter.

Club Holds Gay Holiday Party

Members of the Business and Professional Women's Club last night assembled gifts for children and women who otherwise would not be remembered on Christmas, and at the same time had a gay holiday party themselves.

They met at the Lafayette Hotel where their monthly dinnners are held, and devoted the evening to games such as they might have planned, had they been entertaining boys and girls who still believed in Santa Claus. The party was all fun, with no speeches and no formality.

There were guessing games, cracker-eating contests, a treasure hunt, "Going to Jersualem," a newspaper race, question and answer contest and a lamplighter contest. At the end of the games, they marched around the Christmas tree and each selected one of the joke gifts they had brought for each other, all limited to 10 cents in cost.

Among the guests were Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and a member of the Washington group; Miss Nina Kinsella, president of the Washington club; Mrs. Lucy Somerville Howorth, national program co-ordinator, and Mrs. Marion Britt, national legislative representative.

Miss Ada Chew was chairman of the committee, which included Miss Maxey Mayor, Miss Aura Monroe, Miss Mae Murray, Miss Catherine O'Donnell Miss Ann G. Paul, Miss Carlisle, Miss Ora Marshino and Mrs. Sarah Griffith.

War Mothers Plan Christmas Party For Mt. Alto Inmates

A Christmas party will be given tomorrow night by the District of Columbia Admiral Countz and Bicentennial chapters of the American War Mothers at Mount Alto Hospital for veterans staying there during the holidays.

Mrs. Mary T. Shanahan, national custodian of records, and a member of the District of Columbia Chapter, is general chairman. The hospitalization chairmen of the chapter, Mrs. Julia Bromley, Mrs. Mary E. Glascock and Mrs. Katie Gross, are assisting her in arranging the program for the affair.

There will be recitations by Mrs. Gross and Mrs. Ann Wright; songs by Miss Ethel Roddy and Miss Ethel Burroughs; Hawaiian dances by Mrs. Katherine Zock, and piano numbers by Mrs. Lizabeth Waters, national corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Laura Mae Daugherty.

Presidents of the chapters who will assist during the evening and in serving the refreshments are Mrs. John Eckert, Mrs. Norman N. Nock and Mrs. Martha E. Moore and the State president, Mrs. Emil Walter.

A. A. U. W. Host To Children

"Alice in Wonderland," a peek behind the scenes and ice cream and cookies, all were included in the Christmas party given at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women yesterday afternoon for children of members of the Washington branch.

The party took the place of the regular Monday afternoon tea and was attended by both children and grown-ups. The program was presented by the playground puppet group under Miss Maud Parkins, director of girls' activities; Mrs. Ann Kalesius, Miss Mary Marshall, a playground director, and Miss Maria Flesch. After the performance, the young members of the audience were permitted to see the puppets worked.

The children who manipulated the marionettes and took the speaking parts were Ruth Saxton, who handled the puppets for the characters of Alice and Mumble, the clown, and talked for Mumble; Lenore Schilling, who was the voice for Alice; Jane Differ, who manipulated the puppets for Jumbo and Tiger and did the speaking parts as well; Edwin Rich, who did Little Black Sambo and the Mock Turtle; William Peters, the witch.

Mrs. George B. Ross was hostess.

To Whom It May Concern

The Tigers' trade with the Red Sox which sent Pitcher Elden Auker to the Boston club insures more regular attendance at the Detroit games by Mr. Walter O. Briggs, who happens to own the club . . . Briggs refused to watch the Tigers play whenever it was announced that Auker would be his team's pitcher . . . he had lost all faith in the underhand hurler's ability to win . . . the rift between Briggs and Manager Mickey Cochrane reached a laughable point last summer when Briggs, hearing the broadcast of a Detroit game while aboard his luxurious yacht, reached the Detroit dugout by radio telephone and criticized Cochrane's strategy.

POVICH.

Dutch Clark didn't resign as coach of the Detroit Lions . . . he was fired by Owner Dick Richards who had listened all season to poison poured into his ears by disgruntled college coaches in the Detroit sector who wanted Clark's job . . . Richards moved his Lions into spacious Navin Field, hired a new general manager, outfitted the players in gaudy uniforms, staged dazzling sideshows between the halves, hired a 90-piece band, and then naively expected a run-of-the-mine football team to perform in keeping with the high-powered surroundings . . . among the things he forgot was to hire a forward passer for the Lions, who were pitiably weak in the air.

Abandon hope all ye All-American candidates who happen to be No. 2 backs . . . Ernie Pickert was the last No. 2 or blocking back who made All-American and that was 1931 . . . Marshall Goldberg, a blocker last season, made his reputation as a "deep" back, playing the No. 3 and No. 4 positions . . . stores are showing Christmas ties of synthetic silk manufactured in Germany from by-products of coal . . . would Secretary Ickes have the U. Ted Williams, the Minneapolis product who hit 43 home runs last year, will be the Red Sox's regular right fielder in 1939, according to Joe Cronin . . . who has not yet encountered any baseball man who doubts that Williams is of big league calibre . . . the Red Sox took a two-week look at Williams last spring and shipped him to Minneapolis.

Boston Wants Bergman

The name of Dutch Bergman is up for serious consideration at Boston College where they are seeking a successor to Gloomy Gil Dobie . . . a pair of former Washington pitchers, Alex McColl and Leon Pettit, are now managers in the Sally League . . . of many a pitcher it has been said that "he doesn't have enough speed to break a pane of glass," but Pettit once set a new low . . . angry at a news cameraman, he picked up a flash bulb and heaved it against a brick wall . . . and failed to break the bulb . . . Harry Harper, the old Washington pitcher, has a boy in Princeton and frankly admits "he's not much ball player."

George Sisler is making more money as a sporting goods salesman and czar of St. Louis' soft ball leagues than he made as a ball player . . . major league umpires are up in arms at the new rule which saddles them with the responsibility of ruling whether outfield flies are deliberately dropped . . . "They're trying to make mind readers out of us," said one veteran ump who shall remain nameless else he'd probably be sacked . . . Arch McDonald has again turned down an offer to broadcast baseball in New York . . . the Yankees are holding out for $150,000 for their broadcasting rights . . . the American League's newest official movie, tracing the history of the game, takes more than a subtle crack at the National League . . . at the fadeout it portrays a lad asking his father "Why was the World Series so short this year?"

Santini Tops Clarke

Astor Clarke, the country's No. 1 duckpin bowler for the last three years, has been beaten four out of five time by Tony Santini in head-to-head matches . . . Santini this year has rolled three five-game sets of more than 700 . . . bowling scores are higher because of the new fibre of the alley backstops which are more lively and make for more damage on the rebound . . . there are 450 alleys in Washington's bowling establishments . . . and 265 leagues are operating in the Capital, with an enrollment of approximately 18,000 bowlers . . . every Washington alley now pays its pin boys 3½ cents per game instead of the previous scale of 3 cents per game . . . the pin boys strike was a complete victory . . . pins, which cost $4.12 per set and are made of choice maple, are replaced by first-class alleys after being in use for 250 games.

Cardinals Are Beaten By Citadel

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Catholic University's cagers dropped their third straight of the current season and second in three night's to a South Carolina collegiate quintet last night in the Cardinals' gymn when The Citadel five dealt Fod Cotton's charges a 48-37 defeat.

After suffering defeats inflicted in the last seconds of play in previous games with Loyola and Clemson, the Catholic U. five was favored to win over The Citadel after the latter dropped a one-sided tilt to George Washington in their other local game—but with the exception of the first few minutes the result was never in serious doubt.

Wayne Ambrose, second high scorer in the District last year, salvaged a little glory for the Cardinal's with a spectacular one-man scoring exhibition that netted 21 points, from a foul shot and ten field goals. The stocky guard on the football team scored with his specialty, an over-the-head shot, seven times and threw in three other baskets from various positions.

Burrows Leads Visitors

Jake Burrows, three-letterman with the Bull Dogs, was the high point man of the visitors—with 13—but his feat of scoring 12 points in a row when his team trailed 5 to 3 was a main factor in the victory. Burrows, who was also high point man in the G. W. game, dropped five field goals and two fouls, and before another teammate scored he had personally put his team on top, 14-11.

White, Ambrose and Pirro gave the Cardinals a 5-2 advantage in the early moments of the game, the only lead they were to enjoy throughout. Burrows then went on his scoring rampage and The Citadel lead was soon 24 to 13, with Propst and Freeman assisting in the scoring.

The visitors led, 26-19, at half time, and at the start of the second half they caught the Cardinals napping and dropped in 10 consecutive points to put the score beyond reach. Ambrose led a brief C. U. rally that closed the gap to 8 points —43-35—then they ran out of time and baskets and the final whistle caught the score at 48-37.

A Beautiful Shot

Freeman, with 12 points, and Propst with 10, assisted Burrows with the brunt of the scoring for the South Carolinians, while White and Carmen Pirro each tallied 6 for the Cards. Pirro made one basket with a beautiful stop of a pass the length of the court and dropped the ball in the hoop.

It was the second victory in three starts on The Citadel's trip, having defeated Richmond prior to the Colonial game, one of the only times the Spiders have lost in their home gym in three years. The Citadel also lost to Duke.

Duke Coaches Moaning as Listless Squad Prepares to Leave Today for Rose Bowl

Cockiness of Boys Adds to Woes of Brain Trust

By the United Press.

Durham, N. C., Dec. 19.—Everybody was happy tonight but the Duke coaching staff as the Blue Devils finished their next-to-last drill and started packing their "Sunday" uniforms for their first trip to California.

The coaching staff appeared almost tearful because of the listlessness of the Dukes, which they blamed partly on their exuberance off the field and partly on what they feared might develop into an attack of overconfidence.

The Devils were suffering from a "we-leave-tomorrow" case of impateince and seemed anxious to get through today's drill which was another stiff one. The Dukes were far below the form they displayed in early drills last week.

Defense against the powerful running and passing attack of Southern California's Trojans was stressed as usual, but there were brief sessions in all departments during which the team appeared enthusiastic only about train time.

Willard (Bolo) Perdue, star end, and Allen Johnson, stocky little guard, looked well on defense despite the general "poor showing" as a strong freshman team paraded

Blue Devils Off Form in Next to Last Home Workout

U. S. C.'s power plays against the first and second strings.

Return to form of Purdue brought the Blue Devils into top physical condition. Only George McAfee, Duke's triple-threat southpaw passer, could be classed as on the ailing list, and his condition was described as better than it has been all season.

McAfee, who suffered a foot injury before the season opened, complained that "it feels like I've got rocks in my shoe when I run." Scar tissue from an operation left a misplaced bunion on the sole of his foot.

Tony "one-play" Ruffa, Duke tackle, who has kicked eight consecutive extra points, held a kicking drill of his own after regular practice. He missed several field goals from the 25 and 30-yard lines, but when he moved out to the 36 he consistently sent four out of five over the cross bars.

The Devils' special 10-car train leaves at 4 p. m. tomorow. Practice sessions were scheduled for Pine Bluff, Ark., and Lubbock, Tex., home of the Texas Tech. A five-hour sightseeing tour at Grand Canyon was planned for Friday before the team arrives in Pasadena early Saturday morning.

Bantam King Fails to Win Single Round

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Punching the puffed, blood-streaked features of his opponent with the finesse and patience of a sculptor, Al Mancini, of Providence, last night scored a decisive ten-round victory over World's Bantamweight Champion Sixto Escobar, in an over-the-weight bout at Turner's Arena. The decision was unanimous.

Escobar, vanquished in several previous nontitle matches, lost the last nine rounds on the official score sheet, and was held even in the first as Mancini drilled him with an unrelenting stream of gloves. The little brown man was staggered in the seventh by a hard left to the pit of the stomach, and bewildered in the tenth as Mancini stormed all over him, but stood up under the punishment. There were no knockdowns of any description.

An 8-5 favorite by virtue of an eleventh hour shift in betting odds, Mancini tore down the aura of invincibility surrounding Escobar with his left hand. The right was not idle, but it was the left—pounding like the surf on Escobar's nose and body, that carried the night. He stayed as close to the bantam king as his trunks, pumping leather all the while and refusing to give the titleholder a chance to bring his vaunted right into play.

Crowd Surprised

The audience was astounded and plainly disappointed by Sixto's poor showing, but it was not his ineffectiveness as much as Mancini's clever work that was responsible for his performance. Anybody would have looked bad in there against Mancini last night, for the midget mauler followed instructions from his corner to the letter.

Throughout the fight Mancini circled to Escobar's right, but described an arc wide enough to destroy the effectiveness of Sixto's best weapon. And as he circled Mancini bobbed and weaved into position to throw his left, seldom failing to score. He chased Escobar from the first bell to the last, and not only was willing but eager to slug with him. The first to break ground invariably was Escobar. Escobar vainly sought an opening for a knockout right, but landed with it only twice, and then the damage was negligible. He missed no less than three shots with the right—all labeled knockout, by a hairbreadth.

Mancini drew claret in the second round, banging Sixto on the bridge of his nose with a hard left that tore the cartilege in the nose. He clubbed the champion unmercifully throughout the third round, almost bringing him down with a brace of jarring rights to the skull. But Ecobar proved, at least, that he is a good catcher, by standing up under the Italian's constant pounding although he was in full retreat a good part of the time.

Escobar Rallies

Escobar's best round was the fifth in which he drove home three good lefts and nailed Mancini with a stiff right to the head, but Al refused to let him take the offensive and bored in with both hands and forced Sixto to cover. Again in the sixth Escobar stung Mancini with a hard right to the pit of his stomach as they answered the bell, but again the eventual winner found the range with his left and resumed alterations on Escobar's nose.

It was all Mancini over the remainder of the distance as Escobar, furiously pedaling his bicycle, tried to find cover, with Mancini literally running after him, belaboring him with both hands.

Toby Tobias, 139½, former University of Miami ringman, and Pancho Huerta, 136½, gave the fans a repetition of the Nova-Farr heavyweight battle in a rousing six-round semifinal that found both tired and bloody at the finish. Tobias won a unanimous decision.

Unable to fathom Huerta's crowding, pitty-pat punching, Tobias lost the first round, but turned to boxing in the succeeding rounds, and had things pretty much his own way. Huerta, for some inexplainable reason, turned southpaw midway through the bout, puzzling for a time his opponent, who never before faced left-hand pitching.

Zuzu Piptts, 125½, scored a technical knockout over "Kayo" Clark, 125½, after 2 minutes, 30 seconds of futile milling in the fourth and final round of the opening preliminary.

Billy Selveredge, 128, a newcomer to professional ranks from Baltimore, won a unanimous decision over Toby Scroggins in another 4-rounder, giving the Washington boy a terrific lacing.

Billy Carrigan, 135, a promising young Baltimore lightweight, put Brooks Bowen down for nine counts in the first and second rounds before winning a technical knockout over the Richmond stringbean in 2 minutes 20 seconds of the second round. Bowen, 137, shook up Carrigan in the first round with a good right to the head, but almost immediately after assumed a horizontal position when Carrigan crashed a right to the button.

Charity Elevens Here Plan Hard Drills for Game

Strenuous drills for their charity clash on January 7 at Catholic University Stadium will be undergone tomorrow by the football teams of Warwick A. C. and the All-Stars. Warwick will practice at Seat Pleasant at 7:45 p. m. and the All-Stars at 8 p. m.

Warwick, under the tutorship of Tuffy Leemans, former G. W. backfield ace and hero of the professional New York Giants' victory over Green Bay Packers last week, yesterday announced the addition of Al Kidwell to its line-up. Kidwell was the ball-lugger who kept Eastern's grid team on top of the heap a few years ago. He earned an all-high rating two years in succession.

Bill Hallahan Is Released By Phillies

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—Release of Wild Bill Hallahan, veteran southpaw pitcher for the Phillies, was announced today by President Gerry Nugent.

Hallahan, rated as one of the wealthiest players in baseball, said he might foresake baseball for a year to take a cruise around the world.

Wild Bill, who came to the Phillies from Cincinnati, has not been effective for the past three years. His best seasons were with the St. Louis Cardinals in their pennant-winning years or 1930 and 1931.

All-Stars, Plaza Softball Teams Turn Back Foes

Community Center All-Stars won two games and Plaza Beverage Co. won one last night in the Community Center Indoor Softball League at Tech High gym.

Plaza, with Ferdie Johncox allowing but two hits, won a 7-2 decision over the Unknowns. Johncox added to his laurels by fanning seven in a row. "Jumbo" Sullivan and "Stretch" Mills of the victors got two hits apiece.

After receiving a forfeit from Treasury, Community Center All-Stars agreed to play their game with the Unknowns, originally scheduled for tonight. The All-Stars won, 10-0. "Bump" Simonds and Bill Edwards held the losers hitless. Jenkins, Greaf, Oremland and Simonds hit for extra bases.

Anacostia Eleven Awarded Letters At Banquet

Football players of Anacostia High, newest school in the inter-high athletic series, received their letters last night at a banquet staged in the school's cafeteria. Coach Arthur (Dutch) Bergman, of Catholic University, was the guest of honor and principal speaker.

High spot on the program was the presentation made by Coach "Rusty" Thompson, of Tech, the school which was on the short end of the season's outstanding series upset, a 13-7 beating by Anacostia, of the football used in the crucial game.

Players receiving the crimson A's were Gordon, Dix, Faircloth, Abshur, Turner, Coon, Herbert, Leftwich, Seaman, Scott, Duball, Dyer, Howard, Hunt, Tizard and Lainhart. One of the regular awards was also given Frank Clements, youthful player who didn't make the team but was outstanding for his continuous work for the other men. Student Manager Irving Falk was also awarded a letter.

St. John's Prep Quintet Beats Anacostia, 25 to 22

John Placos Star Despite Team's Loss

Mulvihill, Gallagher Effective for Victors; Corrado and Hunt, Novices, Play Well

The accurate foul shot eye of Johnny "The Jeep" Placos, scrawny little forward of Anacostia's youthful Indians, was not enough to keep the lads from the flats in the ball game and Anacostia lost its third game of the season last night, 25-22, to a highly overrated St. John's Prep five. About 300 witnessed the slow game in the Anacostians' new gym.

Despite the loss, Placos was easily the star of the game, earning high point honors with 10, and handling the ball with an ease which belied his inexperience. Eight of his points were scored from the foul line, the total number of efforts he was allowed being nine.

The victory started St. John's cage season for the year, a year which may not prove as successful as last for the Washington champions. Jim Mulvihill and Joey Gallagher were just as effective as during their brilliant 1937-38 season, but the support given them by the rest of the team was negligible. Gallagher tied with Frank Cady, backfield ace of the Johnny grid team, for team point honors with seven.

Probably the best newcomer to the regular St. John's line-up is a diminutive guard, Joe Corrado. Too small to play last season, Corrado started the game for St. John's last night and played throughout with very few errors. Martin Hunt, another novice, played well but was ousted by the personal foul route midway of the contest.

It was Corrado who fouled Jack Koontz, of the Indians, to allow the latter to score the first point of the game. The lead shifted three times in the initial period, St. John's holding a 4-3 margin at the whistle. The second period was a repetition of the first, the teams alternating at their goals. St. John's ended the first half with a 12-9 lead.

The Indian's scrappy forward, Bob "Flash" Gordon, scored all of the team's 4 points in the third session, while the Johnnies posted but three counters. St. John's moved ahead to hold a 21-15 lead early in the fourth and final session, but Placos continued his foul shooting to bring Anacostia up close at the end.

Wilson Denies Plans to Succeed Coach Zuppke

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 19 (AP).—Wendell S. Wilson, athletic director of the University of Illinois, issued a statement last night saying he had never contemplated succeeding Robert C. Zuppke as head football coach.

It was his first public comment since the school's board of trustees began consideration of the football situation three weeks ago.

The athletic board had advocated retiring Zuppke on a pension of $6,000 annually. The board of trustees rejected the plan.

Wilson, in his statement, said one of the athletic board members had suggested he take over the job as head football coach, but he said:

"I am interested only in the athletic directorship and that is a full-time job."

Wilson said he had offered a job as assistant football coach to Harold (Red) Grange, but that the offer had been refused.

Marines Win Game, 65-32

Barracks Quint Beats Engravers; Army and Navy Yard Triumph

Led by John Klescz, who tallied a dozen baskets and three fouls for 27 points to take the lead in point-scoring in the league, the Marine Barracks five crushed the Bureau of Engraving quintet last night, 65-32, in a U. S. Government Basketball League game played as part of a triple-header at the Bolling Field gym.

In the other games played the Army Medical Center team turned back the CCC NP-7 five, 47-30, to score their third victory in six games. Frank Elliott, former Yale star, moved into second place in league scoring with 64 points by accounting for 17 tallies to pace his team to victory. The winners showed the way at the half, 20-16, and extended their lead in the second half. This was the third defeat in four starts for CCC.

In the final game the Navy Yard Marines finally hit the win column after five attempts by conquering the Procurement cagers, 36-26, for the latter's fifth setback in a row. The Marines were in front at the intermission, 18-7.

Tonight at the Bolling Field gym the Bolling Field quintet will go after their fourteenth straight victory, having won 16 and lost 3 thus far this season. The Trans-Lux Hourglass five of the Huerich League will furnish the opposition. In the preliminary tilt the Bureau of Engraving girls will take on the Rural Electrification girls, starting at 7:30 p. m.

Firemen Win From PWA

Triumph, 36 to 34, In Heurich League; FBI Five Victor

Picking up a loose ball and dribbling into the basket in the third extra period, Ross last night supplied the winning points as D. C. Fire Department tossers defeated PWA in Heurich Amateur Basketball League play in Heurich Gymnasium last night, 36 to 34.

In the other feature Federal Bureau of Investigation turned back the sensational long-distance shooting Dapper Dan Club after a hot duel, 48 to 39.

By mutual agreement of both clubs the game involving Delaware & Hudson and Little Tavern was postponed due to the inability of D. & H. to place a team on the floor following the ban placed on Fred Thomas, Waverly Wheeler and Cliff Keyser by the District A. A. U. due to charges of professionalism.

Friday night's games have been postponed until a later date and a special meeting has been scheduled for the Heurich business office next Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at which time the league's eligibility code will be definitely determined.

Abbotts Hour Pays Backers $119.20

New Orleans, Dec. 19 (AP).—H. D. Cox's inconsistent gelding, Abbots Hour, captured the mile-and-70-yard race at the Fair Grounds today and paid the biggest odds of the season, $119.20 for $2.

Joe Dyer had Abbots Hour well up from the start and just got up in the closing strides to beat out Beaver County. Happy Helen was third.

Spiders Bow To Panthers

Pittsburghers Take Cage Battle, 47-24, Scoring With Ease

Milhiser Gymnasium, Richmond, Va., Dec. 19.—The mighty Pittsburgh Panthers basketball team handed the University of Richmond an overwhelming defeat here tonight, 47 to 24.

The Spiders, apparently awe stricken, were unable to score a field goal during the first half and did not account for a 2-pointer until after 3½ minutes of the second half.

Meanwhile, the fast passing and lively moving Panther quintet scored almost at will and set up a 25-to-7 lead after the first 20 minutes of play. All of the Richmond scoring was done from the free throw line and it was a scant 7 points.

The Panthers put up a corking defense and it was seldom that the Spiders were able to work the ball under their goal for a shot at the basket.

Omanski Decides Against Pro Grid

Chicago, Dec. 19 (U.P.).—Bill Omanski, star Holy Cross fullback who was obtained by the Chicago Bears in the National Professional Football League draft recently, said tonight he would not play pro football.

"I've played enough football," the captain of the Crusaders said.

Omanski, who stopped here en route to San Francisco with the East All-Star team, did not disclose his future plans.

Eastern Five, Bethesdans Play Tonight

Lincoln Parkers to Dedicate New Gym In Cage Debut With Strong Suburbanites

Eastern's White Tide, down to the dimensions of an oversized ripple in its own opinion after a cage beating by G. W. High, of Alexandria, last week, makes its local debut tonight at 8:30, playing host to Bethesda-Chevy Chase. The game, preceded by an alumni clash between Eastern and Roosevelt, will dedicate the Lincoln Parkers' new gym.

Of Eastern's opening effort last week, wherein it was limited to but three field goals, Coach John MacBride says, "It was probably the best thing that could have happened to the team. It doused a lot of cocky ideas the boys had, as well as giving them experience against a seldom-seen type of defense."

Despite the ease with which Eastern won the inter-high basketball series last year, and the fact that the captain of last year's club is still on hand, Coach MacBride expects his first year as mentor of the White Tide to be anything but simple. Two outstanding transfers, Lenny Mills from Tech and Bap Battiste from St. John's, along with several former reserves still leave the Eastern coach cold. "When you see this bunch in action," he says, "you'll realize they're much slower than last year's squad. On top of that, several of them are notably bad shooters. They looked good with other teams, but with each other they haven't started to click, yet."

Because of the shortcomings of the first stringers, Coach MacBride will use as many players as possible in tonight's test. He doesn't consider Bethesda the strongest team around the District, but he does think it may be more than a match for Eastern. Having watched the Bethesdans function against Western, and lose, MacBride will have his men concentrate on only two or three of them. Jim Kinsmen and Johnny Shumate he considers the main threats.

Eastern will be the third public high school to engage Bethesda on the court. Both the others, Western and Tech, won by reasonable margins. Whether the Tide rolls over the suburbanites or not, some measure of the strength of three Inter-High teams can be computed after tonight.

Bucs' Collapse Tops 1938 Disappointments

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 19.—Pie Traynor, sitting in the hotel lobby here during the big league baseball convention, sighed gustily and said:

"Nobody knows what starts a thing like that, and after it starts there's not a thing in the world you can do about it except just sit and suffer."

Pie was referring, of course, to the collapse of his Pittsburgh Pirates in the closing weeks of the recent National League race, a collapse that saw them throw away an apparently air-tight lead and blow the pennant to the Chicago Cubs in the last 48 hours.

Now, 70 sports writers participating in the eight annual Associated Press poll have agreed with Pie that his plucked Pirates supplied the greatest disappointment of the 1938 sports season, with only the Rice Institute football team offering serious opposition.

Rice Runnerup

Rice, you may recall, was the gridiron colossus that was going to mop up the Southwest Conference and then chase some unlucky team right out of the Rose Bowl. It had in Ernie Lain a veritable backfield genius who had led the sophomore eleven of the previous year to the Southwest Conference title. By winning only four of ten starts, the Owls easily took runnerup disappointment honors over Max Schmeling, who was belted out in the first round by Champion Joe Louis.

With points awarded on a 3-2-1 basis as each of the participating experts made three choices, Pittsburgh piled up 52 points to 49 for Rice and 29 for Schmeling. The Pirates were first choice of 14 writers, while 15 thought Rice flopped the hardest and 8 voted for Schmeling.

Fourth in the list was Dizzy Dean, who cost the Cubs $185,000 and then came up with a lame arm. He had 27½ points. B. failing to win the national professional football crown again the Washington Redskins drew 20 points, and the Chicago Cubs had 16 points plastered on them for four-straight defeats by the Yankees in the World Series.

Cleveland's failure to place higher than third in the American League was good for 9. Al Hostak, the Seattle boy who knocked out Freddie Steele for the middleweight championship and then was beaten half to death by Solly Krieger, attracted 9 points.

Cards, Gehrig Tie

The St. Louis Cardinals and Lou Gehrig, veteran Yankee first baseman, had 7 apiece. Six points each went to the New York Giants, the West Virginia football team and the U. S. Walker Cup team, which was trimmed by the British side.

Two points: University of Texas football team, Mysterious Montague, the fabulous golfer; Ohio State football team, Nebraska football team, Bob Feller, Cleveland pitcher; the Tony Galento-Harry Thomas fight.

Harnessmen Already Prepping For 1939 Hambletonian

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 19.—As one who in early years thought a sulky was a grouchy driver, but now knows it is the other way around, this corner is intrigued by some information brought in by Alden Calkins on the winter activity of harness horses, not including those hitched to plows, milk wagons, or posts in front of the courthouse.

Calkins, public relations representative for the Trotting Horse Club of America, recently returned from Goshen, N. Y., and he reports there is no truth to the rumor that the horses he saw pulling flyweight chariots around Good Time track were just finishing the final heat of the 1938 Hambletonian Stakes. They're just getting a head start on the 1939 event.

The Goshen track now, Calkins says, is a bleak scene compared with Hambletonian Day, when nearly 40,000 enthusiasts make the village limits bulge. But day after day, in rain and snow and sleet, drivers monotously trot their horses around the track, warmed by the thought of next year's grand circuit events and the $40,000 Hambletonian purse.

Harness horses race five months during the summer, but constant training during the other seven is necessary to condition them for several miles any given day. The miles are broken into heats and each clocked in 2:04 or thereabouts.

There are two definite schools of thought on Northern and Southern training locales during the winter. Some horsemen insist the rugged northern winters build bone and muscle and stamina. Others insist Northern trainers ruin their horses with too much hardship. It seems to be about a tie, as this year finds the world champion pacer, Billy Direct, training in the hardy climate at Syracuse, N. Y., while the world champion trotter, Greyhound, is taking his winter school work at Seminole Park, Fla., near Orlando.

The necessity for continuous schooling, Calkins points out, is brought about by the fact that trotting and pacing are unnatural gaits, and if the horses aren't drilled steadily they will revert to a natural running gait, or, if they are smart, walking, as they aren't going anywhere but in circles anyway.

Trotting and pacing were created in the pre-Revolutionary era by seekers of greater riding comfort. A galloping horse jolts the daylights out of whatever it is pulling, while a horse with the diagonal trotting or the lateral pacing gait flows along on an even keel.

There aren't many more comfortable rides than a gently swaying 26-pound sulky behind a trotter or pacer which can negotiate a mile in two minutes or better, but it's every man to his own taste. After viewing a few pileups at county fairs, this corner will take a good, sturdy velocipede with rubber handle grips, bumps and all.

Holds Detroit Record

Elf Lock, 7-year-old mare now in the thoroughbred breeding stud owned by Fred B. Koontz, Oklahoma sportsman, still holds the record for one mile at the Detroit course. Elf Lock set her record in 1934, running the distance in 1:37 1-5.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Over the Rim

New York, Dec. 19.—Those who saw Lou Nova, the young California heavyweight, in his latest fight, which took place at Madison Square Garden last Friday night, and many who were not among those present, were stirred with enthusiasm over the week-end, which wasn't in the least surprising. Any new heavyweight with a measure of merit was certain to cause a flurry of excitement among the fight fans.

VIDMER.

Too long they have waited for someone to come along with even a vague promise of giving Joe Louis a battle for the throne on which he sits so solidly. For months the only names that have been mentioned as prospective challengers have been too familiar to the public. Max Baer, Tony Galento, Tommy Farr, Gunnar Barlund, Bob Pastor—these five just about ended the list of those considered as possibilities. And the pugilistic public couldn't get stirred up over any of them.

Galento was knocked out of the picture, temporarily at least, by pneumonia. And when he recovered, his knockout victory over Harry Thomas in Philadelphia, instead of re-establishing him among the contenders for the crown, served to relegate him to the background. At least in the minds of the witnesses who went away with the firm impression that two-ton Tony wasn't as deadly with his flailing fists as Harry Thomas tried to make him appear.

Pastor also passed from the picture in Philadelphia, if not sooner. He was badly beaten by a stocky young puncher by the name of Gus Dorazio, almost a total stranger in these parts. Besides Louis had already beaten Pastor, as he has beaten Farr and Baer. No one was working up a case of hysterics wishing he would meet any of them again. And that left only Gunnar Barlund, but Nova took care of him a month or so ago by knocking him out.

The last lingering hope for a challenger was Nova himself, and the betting was that he wouldn't be able to get by Tommy Farr when they met at the Garden last Friday.

So Farr, No Farther

But Nova did get by Farr. He won easily, with only one dissenting vote as far as I've been able to find out. Strangely enough that dissenting vote was cast by the referee who thought he had seen a draw. This left most of the other 10,000 persons present wondering just what the referee had been looking at all evening.

Nova couldn't knock Farr out even when he had him weak and wobbling through the fourteenth round. In that session the California youngster hit the Welshman on the chin with everything but Mike Jacobs' cash register, but the shaggy blond battler from across the seas took it and remained standing, his eyes glazed, his knees doing a Leon Errol, but his heart still ticking. There were times when Nova lifted Farr's chin off his chest with his left hand and held it up so he could get a better shot at it with his right. Farr was too weak even to utter a mild protest, but he took it and stayed up.

Nova couldn't knock him out, but neither could Braddock, Baer or Louis. And one thing must be said in favor of the newcomer; Nova gave Farr a much worse beating than any of the other three, all of whom have been or are the heavyweight champion of the world.

Room for Improvement

Still, I can't quite see Nova as a worthy opponent for Joe Louis. Not yet, anyway. He is at least a year away in the matter of experience. He doesn't move naturally on his feet, but looks like a fighter who has been taught how to shift and shuffle and does both not instinctively but mechanically. He is a fair enough puncher, but doesn't pack a wallop that will drop a man with one blow. And he lacks the stamina required to go 15 rounds at full speed. He was a very tired man himself when his fight with Farr was finished.

There are plenty of men around for Nova to fight—men who are good enough to make him improve, yet not so good that they should cause him any distress or hold him away from the heights at which he is aiming. Men like Max Baer, Tony Galento, Tommy Farr, Gunnar Barlund and Bob Pastor. In other words, men like those who formed the close circle of challengers until Nova came along.

He has fought three of them already. He has beaten Farr and Barlund and he has fought a draw with Pastor. It might be wise if he went through the entire list before thinking of taking on the Brown Bomber. Even by that time he may not be ready.

Looking at Nova from one angle the other night, I reached the conclusion that is a very good heavyweight and one who is likely to improve for some time. He should beat most of the good men and make a lot of money. But looking at him from the angle of a coming heavyweight champion of the world, I couldn't see him. Not with Joe Louis sitting on the throne.

Which is a handicap under which the current and coming heavyweights have to labor. They may be very fair fighters, but spectators and experts are inclined to make a mental comparison between them and Louis and invariably there is a shaking of heads and the conviction that Joe is in no immediate danger.

Tennessee Eleven Concentrates on Its Aerial Offensive

Full Squad Reports For Workout

Vol Coaches Hope To Offset Powerful Ground Attack of Oklahoma Team

By the United Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 19.—Tennessee's football team, holding the first regular practice since end of the season, today concentrated on an aerial attack to supplement the running offense with which the Vols won the Southeastern Conference championship.

All 41 of Tennessee's squad turned out for the practice for the game with Oklahoma in Miami's Orange Bowl January 2.

Coach Bob Neyland planned to emphasize passes during training for the postseason clash, but he said there would be no slighting of the running game with which Tennessee bowled over ten foes during the regular season.

George Cafego, Buist Warren, Bob Sneed and Babe Wood were on the firing end of the passes. Wood's workout was light as he had suffered a broken hand in the Mississippi game.

Norman, Okla., Dec. 19 (U.P.).—For the first time since its game with Washington State on December 5, the entire University of Oklahoma football team donned suits and reported for practice. Thirty-two players were on the field.

After a brief period of calisthenics, the team heard a "pep talk" by Coach Tom Stidham and began working on pass defenses for use against Tennessee University in the "Orange Bowl" game at Miami, Fla., January 2. Stidham said there would be no scrimmages at Norman.

"We may have a scrimmage session at Miami after December 25," he said.

Rain Drives Gaels To Indoor Drills

St. Mary's College, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Rainy weather chased St. Mary's football players indoors today, causing a serious interruption in training preparations for the Dallas Cotton Bowl game with Texas Tech, January 2.

Coach Madigan sent the players through signal drills and calisthenics in the gymnasium.

"After a month's lay-off, we get this kind of weather," he said. "We need practice badly. Some of the boys have colds. Texas tech rightfully will be the favorite when we play. The odds should be twice as big as they are."

Washington Net Star Seeded 12th In Indoor Junior

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Joseph Fishback, St. John's (N. Y.) sophomore and winner of the 1938 title, today was seeded No. 1 for the national indoor junior tennis championship opening at the Seventh Regiment Armory next Monday.

Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, was seeded No. 2, and Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, No. 3. Below the leaders in order were seeded William McGehee, New Orleans; William Gillespie, Durham, N. C.; William Umstaedter, Louisiana State University; Robert J. Freeman, Springfield, Mass.; Malcolm Weinstein, Philadelphia; H. C. Van Renssellaer, New York; Don Buffington, Durham, N. C.; Melvin Schwartzman, New York, and David Johnsen, Washington, D. C.

E. Victor Seixas, jr., of Philadelphia, was seeded No. 1 at the top of 36 entrants in the boys' division of the play. Also seeded were E. Blair Hawley, of Phillips Exeter, N. H., Academy, No. 2; Gardner Larner, Chicago, No. 3, and James Evert, Chicago, No. 4.

Womer Improving After Accident

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 19 (AP).—Maynard (Mutt) Womer, 24, of this city, former university student and former Southern conference champion welterweight boxer, today is reported improving at University Hospital from serious injuries received in an automobile accident on the Richmond highway Saturday night. Attendants said his condition is satisfactory.

Womer's car crashed off the highway about 3 miles from the city when the former boxer is said to have swerved in an attempt to avoid striking a cow. Hurled approximately 50 feet from his car onto the road, he was picked up by Ed Pryor, a passing motorist, and brought to the hospital here. An attending physician said he suffered brain concussion, scalp cuts, a chest injury and a possible skull fracture. X-rays which will determine the extent of the head injury have not been completed.

Skibos in Shape Except for Lee

Bay St. Louis, Miss., Dec. 19 (AP).—Carnegie Tech's football squad of 45 players arrived here today to prepare for the Sugar Bowl game with Texas Christian University at New Orleans on January 2.

Coach Bill Kern said all the players except Jack Lee, fullback, were in good condition.

The team plans two workouts daily at the St. Stanislaus College stadium.

4 Teams Join New League

D. C. Volley Ball Loop Formed at Y.M.C.A.; Others May Enter

As an outgrowth of Friday's meeting at the Central Y. M. C. A., the D. C. Volleyball League has been formed by the four clubs represented: Internal Revenue, War Department Engineers, Interior Department and Y. M. C. A. Ralph Foster, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., has been elected temporary president and D. C. Adamson, Interior, temporary secretary.

With three gyms available, it was tentatively decided to open the league schedule on January 4, but as it is expected that several more teams will apply for franchises, a definite schedule will not be prepared until after the next meeting, to be held at the Central Y. M. C. A., Thursday at 5 p. m.

The Central Y. M. C. A., through Foster, has already donated a handsome trophy for the winning team.

Teams not represented at Friday's meeting may procure further information from Foster, NA. 8250, or from the following members of the executive committee, J. Kadins, War Department Engineers; A. F. E. Scheer, Internal Revenue; A. Pearson, Y. M. C. A., and D. C. Adamson, Interior Department, extension 2158.

Londos' Foe Works Today

TommyO'Toole Plans Session at Arena; Fans Invited

Tommy O'Toole, the brash young Irishman who clinches with Jim Londos for the wrestling championship Thursday night at the Arena, will arrive here today to complete his training for the bout. Thomas will work out at the Arena with Al Baksh, Jim Hayes and Joe Turner.

The public is invited to watch O'Toole do his stuff, and cautioned against registering alarm if he reaches for a pair of boxing gloves, for Thomas is a reformed fisticuffer. He gave evidence of this last week in the ungentlemanly manner in which he disposed of Karl Davis in the final bout of a one-night elimination contest.

A brief biography of O'Toole's fistic career, reprinted herewith by permission of Turner's publicity department, reveals that the young Celt became affiliated with the glove industry soon after arriving in this country from Ireland. He landed—rather settled—in Phoenix, Ariz., and immediately took up the fine old art of boxing.

Among his acquaintances there, still quoting the publicity department, was John Henry Lewis, and the pair freiquently sparred together. O'Toole, after fighting the majority of 30 bouts, quit the beak-busting business for more lucrative wrestling pastures. Lewis, if you recall, went on to win the light-heavyweight championship. O'Toole, thus, will be in position to get tough with Londos, if Jeem wants to rough it up a bit.

O'Toole is regarded as the most formidable opponent Londos has been called on to face recently and is conceded a fighting chance of upsetting the titleholder.

Clagett-Wright Bout Features Gloves Tournament Program

Resume Fierce Fishel-National Guards Rivalry Mayo Is Favorite Over Miller for Crown

No little chagrined by the unexpected downfall of their ablest battler, Billy Kekeris, who lost to Jack Claggett in the Golden Gloves tournament last week, the National Guard team will make a potent bid for the featherweight crown in the tournament finals tomorrow night, sending Gilbert Mayo against Buster Miller.

Unusual interest has been attracted to the engagement because Miller, though listed as unattached, will be seconded by Syd Fishel—bitter rival of the troopers. Bantamweight champion last year and a clever mittman, Mayo is a distinct choince over Miller, who has an aversion to training. Buster was not impressive last week, and only a complete reversal of form will enable him to turn back his opponent.

The rivalry between the Guards and Fishel sprang up several years ago and has prospered like a Wall street banker since. It reached its peak in professional competition when Fishel entered George Abrams, a former Golden Glover, in the lists, and piloted him to recognition as the tenth ranking middleweight of the world. The Guards sponsored Steve Mamakos.

Fresh fuel was added to the rivalry—already blistering hot, when the boys broke even in two bouts. Last week it had another peculiar twist in the Clagett-Kekeris match, for Clagett was a member of the Guards team, but went over to Fishel's National Boxing Club.

Clagett tomorrow battles Carroll Wright, defending champion, for the lightweight honors, and is accorded an excellent chance of winning. If he succeeds the popular Southwest lad probably will turn professional next month and capitalize on his laurels.

On Fishing

Hardly any angler, who takes his sport seriously, that has not heard about the solunar theory of John Alden Knight, since it aroused the interest of the fishing world several years ago.

ACKERMAN.

What many do not know, is that these solunar tables are published in abbreviated form, and that the 1939 edition is just off the press. They may be obtained at most sport stores.

Not by any means the answer to an anglers prayer for good luck, they do, however, forecast with more than a reasonable degree of accuracy the daily feeding times of fresh and salt water fish. Even birds and game respond to these solunar periods, which is the time of the day the gravitational pull of the moon and the sun passes the longitudinal meridian of any particular point. Local disturbances and wind changes will dull or void entirely the inclination of game to move and fish to feed during these periods. For that reason records should be kept of weather conditions and then if fish aren't caught during these periods, it will not be because of any lack of foresight on the part of the angler.

If any reader of this column follow these solunar tables in their fishing, we would appreciate reports on the results.

Anytime it is possible to get two or more black bass fishermen together it is the most simple matter to get a good argument going by claiming weight on length measurement. Few dyed in the wool anglers that do not keep a record, and knowing in addition that bass vary far more than other fish in their weight in relation to length, because of their wide variation in girth measurement, are always ready to stick up for the weights they have found in their measurement. For the same reason there are hardly any two tables published that are alike, and never will be unless figured on fish taken from the same waters.

However, here are two more measurements to be pondered over—of the two best bass taken in Pennsylvania waters this season. The smallmouth was 22 inches long, with a girth of 15½ inches and weighed 5 pounds and 6 ounces. The largemouth was 23 inches in length, with a girth of 16½ inches and weighed 7 pounds and 12 ounces.

Hardy Meakin, manager of Keith's, received yesterday the reels of big game fishing for showing at the Yule season meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter of the Izaak Walton League Wednesday evening at the Bradley Boulevard Clubhouse. His ever-ready interest and desire to present timely subjects for the enjoyment of these sportsmen is appreciated.

For the January 18 meeting Mr. Meakin has promised several first-run reels of hunting dogs working. From the synopsis, any Ike that misses that meeting is going to be sorry.

We have been keenly observant of every phase of the North Atlantic white marlin fishing as it has progressed step by step, from the taking of what is generally supposed to be the first, by Captains Mattson and Nicholson off Ocean City in 1934, through the present season, which definitely placed this fishing port as the No. 1 white marlin grounds of the world.

Now we come across an ageworn diary, brought to the attention of Dr. William B. Wilkins, of Alexandria, that shows that the first white marlin was caught 9 miles east of Cape Charles more than 50 years ago, and by a woman.

Possibly there are others, who have made or know of authentic catches of this greatest gamester of the open seas. If so we would like to know about them, so that the record may be added to the data being collected by such historians as Kip Farrington, Erl Roman and others.

Reports are coming in almost daily of Washington anglers fishing in the Gulf Stream off Miami, and catching sailfish in greater numbers than we have ever noted at this time of the year. For many, it is the first sail, and they are thrilled accordingly. In one case, it was the first, for an ardent fisherman, who has been going back each year for ten seasons, always with the hope that he would finally hang on to one of these spectacular battlers, and his persistence did finally beat his jinx.

There is no particular season or run of the Atlantic sailfish in the waters off Miami. They are there all the time, but because more anglers fish for them from December through March, the reported catches are greater during those months.

We would like to have the negatives of any action snapshots taken during the marlin run off Ocean City this summer, or of the blue and striped bass fishing in the Chesapeake this fall. Many amateur photographers hide swell pictures away because they think they might not be good enough for publication. Let this department look them over and judge them for you.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 19.—Townsend B. Martin's Galapas, a 3-year-old bay colt that showed his fondness for the sunshine country at Hialeah Park last winter when he scored a decisive victory over Lawrin, the 1938 Kentucky Derby winner, sprinted to a handy two-length victory in the Inaugural Handicap here today as the long Florida turf season, growing in importance and interest each year, got under way.

Flying the bright red, white and black silks of T. B. Martin, of Westbury, Long Island, Galapas staved off a late challenge by the Cosgrave Stable's Bob's Boys.

Felix Spatola's veteran Wise Prince, an old favorite in this sector, finished a head farther away. This fellow carried the bulk of the play. He came from well back while losing ground and could not become a threat.

A large and colorful crowd, estimated at more than 10,000, nearly 2,000 more than attended last year's opening, visited the Coral Gables plant. Over a racing strip that figured to be slower with the recent addition of new top soil, Galapas stepped the 6 furlongs in the flashy time of 1:12 flat under Alfred Robertson. He was second choice in the betting, paying $8.90.

The day's mutuel handle was likely to pass $200,000, which would top the opening a year ago.

Don Meade Returns

One of the highlights of the afternoon was the return to the saddle of Don Meade, who was ruled off by the Florida Racing Commission March 4, 1936, for ignoring the rules of racing in his wagering activities. Meade, who was granted a license to ride an hour before today's program began, rode two horses which were not good enough to find a place in the money. The lightweight veteran was given a fine round of applause by the crowd.

Galapas did not take long to assert his superiority over the nine crack thoroughbreds that opposed him. After a preliminary skirmish with Gay Balko, which lasted a quarter mile, the Martin representative stole into a clear advantage. He never faltered thereafter. Bob's Boys gradually worked his way forward and just lasted to beat out Wise Prince. Mythical King had little chance after he broke poorly.

The first race of the new season, a mile and a furlong test for platers, saw the Larch Hill Stable's Wrenace, a 10 to 1 shot piloted by Maurice Peters, earning initial honors. Nicely rated in the middle of the bunch in the early stages, the gelding charged around the leaders turning for home and drove home by a length in 1:54 3-5. Melody Maid and Espinaca, second and first choices, respectively, could not stave off Wrenace and finished as named. Melody Maid taking the place by another length.

Favorite players cashed their first bet of the season when Chimney Top, 7-year-old plater, easily showed his heels to ten rivals in the 6-furlong second contest. What A Pal, one of the lightly backed contestants, trailed the victor by a length and a half while beating Jessie V. L. by a length for second money. Wayne Wright brought Chimney Top from a position close off the leaders and his mount had no trouble drawing clear in the short stretch. The combination paid $5.50.

Don Meade, in the third, had his mount, which was conceded an outside chance, close up behind the pacemaker and winner, Miss Happy, to the stretch. Then Two Cents tired badly and finished fourth.

Apprentice Nash Scores

Miss Happy, a 6-to-1 chance, made all the running and clicked by a length under the apprentice star, Ronnie Nash. Carla, a J. E. Widener juvenile and favorite, beat Posey by three lengths for the place.

Eddie Arcaro's many followers hit the bull's eye in the fourth race. The powerful booter guided the $4.90 choice, Histrionic, to a hollow score over the mile and 60 yards distance. Harp Weaver, which drew little support, followed the winner over the wire, three lengths behind and a length and a half before Short Distance. Taking the track shortly after the start, Histrionic galloped along with a comfortable advantage, never being menaced. Don Meade finished fifth astride the sluggish Endymion, a 9-to-2 chance.

Breaking like a bullet and hustled into a long lead, the 2-year-old filly Learner had to be hard ridden and whipped to get home by a length and a half in the sixth race of 6 furlongs. Piloted by Bobby Merritt, Learner returned $17.20 for a $2 straight ticket and made the smart time of 1:12 4-5. The heavily backed John's Heir had to be eased out of a jam at the far turn. He closed gamely and accounted for second money, a length in advance of Catechism.

CHIMNEY TOP, reserved off the pace, lay within striking distance of the leaders the entire journey and closed stoutly in the stretch to win under a hard drive. WHAT A PAL lacked early foot the first stages, but closed resolutely in the stretch run. JESSIE V. L. had good speed right from the start, but was not the equal of the first two in the closing drive. MISS HAPPY went to the front at once and under hard urging maintained her advantage to the finish, drawing out slightly. CARLA, in close attendance of the leaders, finished well in the closing strides. POESY, racing on the outside most of the journey, threatened in the stretch drive and may have been in need of a race. HISTRIONIC went to the front right after the break, was taken in hand and held his field safe throughout the entire journey, having speed in reserve at the finish. HARP WEAVER broke on top, was taken off the early pace and came between the leaders in the stretch drive to hold the rest of the field safe. SHORT DISTANCE, unable to keep up the early speed, closed willingly in the closing drive. HUNTING HOME followed in close attendance of the pacemaker, threatened in the stretch and weakened in the last sixteenth. ENDYMION, far out of it, closed well.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALAPAS, $8.90, $5.30, $4.30; BOB'S BOYS, $20.30, $7.10; WISE PRINCE, $3.30.

GALAPAS forced the pace of the leader the first quarter mile, went to the front and held away throughout, having speed in reserve at the finish. BOB'S BOYS, out of the early part of it, gradually improved his position and outgamed WISE PRINCE at the finish. The latter, off slowly, moved up on the outside and closed well in the stretch run. RISSA, prominent throughout, moved up threateningly in the stretch, but weakened when the final test came.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowance. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:25. Off at 4:27. Winner, W. and H. Hitchenshon's b. f. LEARNER went to the front right after the break, opened up a large lead on her field and held her opposition safe at the end under a hand ride. JOHN'S HEIR, prominent the entire journey, held the rest of the field safe. CATECHISM, unable to keep up the early pace, closed gradually on the inside down the backstretch and closed willingly at the end. RANGE DUST followed the winner most of the way, but weakened at the finish. GOOD STAR and SLY KITTY were outrun throughout.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:54. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's b. f. TRINA, reserved off the pace the first half mile, moved up on the outside going down the backstretch, took command rounding the turn for home and won with speed in reserve. BIRDLEA went to the front right after the break, opened up a good lead on the far side, but was not equal to the winner. CAUGHT, off slowly, slipped through on the rail on the first turn and raced evenly throughout.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:22½. Winner, Eazan and Madden's ch. g. Nat'l Press Bldg. Earns 8% on 1st Mortgage Bonds

A statistical report compiled by Arnott, Baker & Co., New York, on the National Press Building in Washington, indicates that for the first half of 1938 the property earned approximately 8 per cent on the first mortgage bonds outstanding. The figures show that for the first six months of the year a gross income of $368,700 was received, compared to $360,100 for the same period 1937.

Operating expenses and taxes increased so that net income before interest amounted to $224,000 in the 1938 period against $229,000 in 1937. The building is about 100 per cent rented with about 17 per cent of the total space occupied by governmental departments or agencies.

The first mortgage on the property is outstanding in the amount of $5,617,000 and interest has been paid at the rate of 5 per cent. There is a junior lien income bond issue also outstanding in the amount of $2,175,000. Interest in 1938 was paid at the rate of 1¾ per cent on these bonds.

Severe Cold Abroad Lifts Wheat Prices

Heat in Argentina Contributes to Rise Of Cent a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—European reports of the worst cold wave experienced in years did much to lift corn and wheat prices about a cent a bushel here today. So, too, did word of an Argentine heat wave.

Some estimates were that transatlantic buying of United States corn the past 48 hours totaled 1,000,000 bushels. Meanwhile, rural offerings of corn to Chicago were scarce, and Buenos Aires quotations were up 2½ cents, because of reported moisture shortage simultaneous with torrid temperature.

Trade nervousness was also manifest over assertions in various quarters that the United States Government's additional crop summary, due Wednesday, would likely show reduced estimates both of winter wheat plant condition and of seeded acreage.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were ¾ to 1 cent higher, compared with Saturday's finish; May, 52½@52⅝; July, 53⅜@53½; wheat, ⅛-¾ up; May, 66⅞@66¾; July, 66½@66⅝; oats, ¾-⅞ advanced; rye showing ¼-½ gain, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents bulge.

Argentina Reports Surplus for Export

The Agriculture Department estimated today that Argentina would have approximately 249,000,000 bushels of wheat available for export in 1939.

The figure was based on an official Argentine estimate of a 316,000,000-bushel wheat crop for the 1938-39 year, stocks on hand of 32,000,000 bushels and an estimated domestic consumption of 99,000,000 bushels.

Prices Work Slightly Lower in Busy Trading Aviation and Utility Shares Are Firm Uncertain Trend Features Bond Market

New York, Dec. 19.—It was a Jack and Jill market today—prices moving up the hill in the early hours to the accompaniment of heavy trading but then falling down in a reaction that carried the composite average of the list lower for the day. The actual decline was 0.18 point while the volume of 1,104,640 shares was concentrated in the period in which the market was rising. Well over half of the 849 issues dealt in showed minus signs at the close but before the decline set in, 17 had registered new highs for 1938.

Heaviest selling took place in the metal division with the steels a close second. Utilities supplied a firm note and there was a good wave of buying in the aviation division, the majority of these stocks holding a part of their early advances.

New highs in the aviation group were scored by Bendix, Douglas, Glenn Martin and United while inactive Wright Aero, which closed up 2½ points, equalled its former top. Bendix was the second most active stock of the day. Small gains were turned in by Sperry, Boeing and North American Aviation.

Shares of the building supply companies started the day in a manner which reflected the encouragement contained in the plans of the Government to extend its loans for building construction but their bulge was cut short by the later reactionary tendencies of the general list. Most of these stocks closed lower, including American Radiator, the two Celotex issues, National Gypsum and United States Gypsum but Johns Manville closed up a point and Lone Star Cement was higher.

It was a busy day for the followers of developments in the railroad field. In general they took kindly to the sum total of the news in their field, for carried shares did better than the average, although closing slightly lower.

Erie Reorganization

The proposed reorganization plan of the Erie Railroad, Chicago-New York trunk line, was filed with the Federal court in Cleveland. The proposal, if put into effect, would halve the system's fixed charges. The Erie has been in the process of reorganization since January.

A proposed reorganization for the Mobile & Ohio also was made public, the plan contemplating the selling of the assets of this road to a new company, the Gulf, Mobile & Ohio, and these properties then merged with those of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern. An additional development in the railroad field was the meeting of members of the New Jersey Legislature to discuss final settlement of the long-drawn-out tax suit of the State against railroads in which tax delinquency is alleged.

Rail issues were well supported in early dealings but the more active averaged lower at the close. Two relatively inactive members, Norfolk & Western and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, ended with point gains.

Steel news was bearish but had been well discounted. The weekly report of the American Iron and Steel Institute placed operations for this week at 51.7 per cent of capacity, a drop of 5.9 points from a week ago and more than 10 points lower than the level of a month ago. The present rate is the lowest since the week beginning October 17 and was somewhat larger than the street had anticipated. Bethlehem sold off nearly a point but there was a small fractional gain in United States Steel. Republic was lower.

Loew's Picks Up

Selling pressure appeared to have relaxed a bit in the movie division, which was a weak feature in recent sessions. Loew's, which bore the brunt of the attack, was up a fraction and its preferred jumped 3¼. Most active stock of the day was low-priced Commonwealth & Southern in the utility division, which had blocks of 9,000 and 12,600 shares at 1½ and 1⅜, respectively.

Traders in the commodities read with interest the comment of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace after his AAA lost four out of five of the referenda on marketing quotas. Ever optimistic, the Secretary declared that despite the rejection, he regarded the vote as constituting a "remarkable indorsement" of the AAA programs. The basis of reasoning is somewhat obscure.

Wheat and corn were firm on reports of a cold wave in Europe. Wheat average up ⅛ to ¾ cent a bushel. Cotton rallied to close up 5 to 10 points on trade buying, with the best prices coming near the close.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bond dealings today reflected the same sort of uncertainty that kept the equities market irregular. Sizable movements in either direction were recorded among the speculative issues. Foreign dollar bonds also turned uncertain. Best grade investment bonds were in good demand, however, as it appears that only a few large offerings of new issues will be available for a few weeks to come. Turnover in all bonds was $9,110,000, as against several sessions last week in which the $12,000,000 mark was eclipsed.

In the speculative carrier group movements were divided about equally between gains and losses, with some of the variations rather large. Default carrier issues displayed the same sort of irregularity. In some instances comparable mortgages of the same road moved oppositely. Local traction bonds likewise were irregular, and contrary variations were noted similarly in holding company issues and industrial convertibles. Communications bonds were soft.

In the foreign section the main trend was downward, but not markedly so. Defaulted Latin-American bonds ran into a little profit-taking, but held to former levels. German and other European default bonds were dull. Italian and Argentine bonds were soft in the high grade foreign group, while Canadian and Scandinavian bonds held to previous levels.

Best rated investment bonds moved slightly higher under the leadership of United States Treasury obligations. Three long-term Treasury issues attained fresh highs for the year on advances ranging from 1-32 to 8-32 point. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations also were firm. Highly rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were mostly up by small fractions.

Sterile Funds Halt Expansion Chapin Says

Nat'l Acme President Blames Washington Sees Awakening

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 19.—Virtual sterilization of the ample funds now in our banks prevents expansion of existing industry and organization of new industries, says Fred H. Chapin today, president of the National Acme Co., Cleveland, writing in the magazine Steel. Mr. Chapin is convinced that as long as this condition obtains, no notable progress can be made toward solving the unemployment problem.

Inventors and designers today have more exact scientific and engineering knowledge and in this respect are in a position to organize new enterprises on a sounder basis than was possible under the rule-of-thumb engineering methods employed by a past generation. Removal of the existing restrictions which force capital into hiding will bring industrial expansion and thus provide more jobs.

"My conviction is that a large measure of responsibility for continued and widespread employment rests with Washington," he says. "However, since the recent elections I feel that an awakening to realities has begun to take place among thousands of working people, which is due to be echoed in the halls of Congress in no uncertain manner. Therefore there now is at least some hope not only of an end to further restrictive legislation, but also the possibility of an easing of some of the many restrictive laws enacted under the pressure of the emergencies during the recent years.

Sterilization

"I am most gravely concerned over virtual 'sterilization' of the ample funds now in our banks—insofar as their use in re-equipping and thereby reviving older industries, and in developing and properly equipping new industries is concerned. America has in the past been a land of opportunity for the working man, not merely because it was a country which had not outgrown its territorial limits.

"A much more important reason was that it has been a country blessed with extraordinarily active industrial imagination and one in which investors both large and small were always ready and eager to finance new inventions and new industrial enterprises, regardless of element of chance which unavoidably enters into such investments.

"As a matter of fact the old-time investor in a new industrial enterprise risked much more than would the investor in a similar enterprise today, by reason of the fact that old-time individualistic inventors and designers did not have the benefit of scientific discoveries and exact engineering knowledge available to the much better organized staffs of inventors and designers today."

Cotton Futures Rally Following Irregularity

..ew York, Dec. 19 (AP).—Cotton rallied late today following early irregularity. March advanced from 8.17 to 8.27 and closed at the high, with final prices 5 to 10 points net higher.

The market opened narrowly with the effects of slightly easier Liverpool cables offset by a little price fixing. Fluctuations were confined to a range of 3 or 4 points until the last hour, when a moderate demand from the trade and a little Wall Street covering found contracts scarce.

Cotton goods were quieter following last week's late spurt. A private estimate of the East Indian crop was reduced by 250,000 bales from a previous estimate and 750,000 bales under last year to a total of 6,450,000 bales of 400 poinds.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents her 106th Musical Morning on Monday in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Artists: Rose Bampton, soprano (Edwin McArthur, accompanist); Genia Nemenov and Pierre Luboschutz, duo-pianists.

Inasmuch as the musicianship of all the artists concerned had been tested and approved on previous occasions, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's Musical Morning in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom yesterday was in the nature of a holiday offering to her patrons. The participants in the program were the estimable American soprano, Rose Bampton, who had Edwin McArthur as her able coadjutant at the piano, and the accomplished piano team of Genia Nemenov and Pierre Luboschutz.

In her share of the recital, Miss Bampton brought forward three unhackneyed and welcome songs: "Bester Jungling" from Mozart's satirical operetta, "Der Schauspieldirektor;" Richard Hageman's "Music I Heard With You" and Mildred Lund Tyson's "Sea Moods." Otherwise she followed a well-trodden path in Torelli's "Tu lo sai," Handel's "O Sleep, Why Dost Thou Leavé Me," the Verdian aria, "Pace, mio Dio;" Bachelet's "Chere Nuit" and Debussy's "Fantoches."

One is still dubious about the ultimate justification of Miss Bampton's elevation of tessitura from contralto to soprano. The natural beauty of her voice has been in no way affected by the change, and her lower tones retain their richness. But when she presses the upper tones, there is evident a widening vibrato which will become a wobble, if care is not taken. The evenness of her scale is not what it formerly was, and a tone now and then loses its resonance. These are disquieting symptoms in a singer who has so much charm of personality and a vocal endowment so effective in lyric persuasion.

In the purely lyrical moments of her singing, one enjoyed without reservation the grace of phrasing, the d

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Contract bridge is a disease," began Ellen Betty Brink in a sparkling and provocative article in this month's Bridge World. "I do not make this statement as a bridge expert," she continues, "for I have no master points. I am not a physician, psychologist or psychiatrist. I am an ordinary bridge-playing housewife; there are millions like me. I am different only in that I have made a business of the game. I know how contagious it is, and the havoc it will wreak!

"With bridge fever there is a strange restlessness, an overpowering desire to perch at a card table to the exclusion of everything else.

"In our town there is a tournament every spring to which very fine players come from surrounding cities. This tournament lasts almost a week, with events every afternoon and night. Every one who fancies his game at all enters some event, and the most rabid fans play themselves into a stupor by competing in all events.

"At one of these sessions last spring an addict who had played without cessation for five days said to me during a lull between deals, 'You know, I have such an antipathy for "tilted" people; I mean these flagpole sitters, marathon dancers and derby roller skaters. They're not normal.'"

The ardors of the Cleveland eight-day tournament failed to leave their mark upon young Robert Appleyard, who for all his youthfulness is a veteran at tournament competition. Today's hand, taken from a pair contest, shows how he manufactured a trick out of thin air to hold his opponents to their contract, which in duplicate is often as important and profitable as bidding and making a grand slam.

Appleyard was partnered with Arthur S. Goldsmith, 1937 Ohio State open pair champion; his adversaries were Edward J. Mori, 1938 Ohio State open pair champion, and that funster and tournament fan, W. Howard Woolworth, of Buffalo.

In the play West led the deuce of clubs. Appleyard won with the queen and laid down the club ace, then exited from his hand with the club four, which declarer trumped.

South now attempted to enter the dummy by finessing the diamond queen, but this lost to East's king. Appleyard was now forced to return a heart, leading the deuce, and West took with his ace. Goldsmith led the club king and Appleyard brilliantly ruffed with his king of trumps, sacrificing that honor, but establishing the ten in his partner's hand. South, compelled to win with the ace, was held to his contract. Any other play by the defense at this point will allow declarer to make three, by entering dummy with the heart suit to take two successful spade finesses.

Appleyard had no way of knowing his partner held the spade ten, but he played for that chance.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

A Virginia girl, MISS THELMA E. ALLEN, is nominated for the title of "Miss Civil Service" and appropriately her name is submitted by S. M. BARRETT who has had occasion to watch Miss Allen's work and who knows of her efficiency. Serving the Government as a secretary in the office of H. A. DAWSON, Jr., Miss Allen is a prominent member of the Interior Department Recreation Association. Now, only 12 days are left before the field of nominations must be closed, so send in the name of the employe you think to be the ideal in the service here.

MISS ALLEN

NAMES and Thoughts: These alleged uncertain times for Federal employes are as nothing, 'tis said by a gentleman who served the Agriculture Department for 55 years. "What I call tough times occurred back in Cleveland's second Administration, when the forces were cut down until it seemed you could count Government clerks on your fingers. Nothing like that now or since" . . . Harry Hopkins may be moving down town, but no one around him would know it; he's still deep in his business at the old stand, and, personally, acts like he's there for awhile . . . We hear on the sidelines that the Civil Service Commission is looking for someone qualified to take the stump frequently and explain to uninformed Americans the technical facts on civil service. Interest—growing interest—in the civil service subject deluges the commission with inquiries and 'tis said 'tis thought that some expert should be available to spread technical data around the land; one who would go out and speak when needs be. And who could be found who might qualify for such a difficult, technical and not-to-say exasperating post? . . . The fine Agriculture Chorus wants the names of any shutins who would like to hear some Christmas carols the evening of December 22. The chorus will be glad to call outside the houses and sing, upon request. The names and address of those wishing the chorus to call should be mailed to John M. Wilson, Box 18, Agriculture.

A BOAT has gone into the beautiful Interior Museum and the boat has a sail of the stuff women like to wear—seal skin.

It is an Eskimo oomiak—a boat made of seal skin and carrying a seal skin sail. It is the latest acquisition at the museum, which, incidentally, is attracting some 300 people a day under the good management of Ned Burns and his assistants.

The boat, a miniature scarcely 3 feet long but complete in every detail (it holds a harpoon and other Eskimo equipment) was brought here the other day from Alaska by Leon Cubberly, who works in the Secretary's office and is secretary of the Alaskan reindeer commission.

He got the boat from an Eskimo on his last trip to Alaska. As secretary of the commission, Cubberly goes often to Alaska, for the reindeer is a vital problem in the economy of the Eskimos. Not so long ago, they nearly starved when the herds became depleted, and a vast importation from Siberia and elsewhere was ordered.

The boat will be placed on exhibition Friday, in the Indian gallery of the museum. Interestingly, it is a replica of the open boat Father Hubbard used in his journeyings.

"DUKE" Strople writes in to say that the A. F. G. E. District Department reports a heavy sale of tickets for its New York and Chicago excursion. Both trains leave Friday; tickets can be had from 1 to 8 p. m. daily at 1422 H street northwest . . . Alice Allmuth leaves the Bureau of Patents through retirement, after 45 years' service, and Mattie Donohoe retires on the same date, January 1, after 37 years . . . U. S. delegates and technical advisers to the Third Pan-American Highway Conference to be held January 13 at Santiago, Chile, include: Edwin W. James, chief, division of highway transport, Bureau of Public Roads, Agriculture; Dr. William R. Manning, State Department; Barton P. Root, chief, highway section, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and Stephen James, director, Highway Educational Board, Washington. Highway construction is the theme.

Bob Burns Says—

I have always maintained that the big wealthy families in the city are not as close as those in a small town, and I got so many arguments on the subject that not long ago, when I was in New York, I thought I'd check up.

I went walkin' out through the fashionable residential district until I came to a big, imposin' lookin' house and I went in. After talkin' my way past a doorman and a couple of butlers, I finally got to see the lady of the house. I says, "Have you any children?"

She says, "Yes, I have one daughter." I says, "Does she live here?" And the lady thought a while and then says, "Well, I suppose she does. I see her at breakfast pret, near every morning."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Story Becomes Exciting

Life's a struggle, To survive
Each to do his best must strive.
—Old Mother Nature.

Struggle is the first great law of life. You see it everywhere. You see it in mankind. You see it among the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. You see it among the biggest and smallest. People who like big words call it competition. It is the great universal law, and those who seek to avoid it, and refuse to abide by it, seldom live long. Those who survive, who live longest, are those who make the most of such talents and abilities as have been given them. This is quite as it should be. It is hard on the stupid, the careless, the lazy, the forgetful, the heedless. It is Mother Nature's way to develop the best.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy were following tracks in the snow. They were the tracks of Jumper the Hare, often called Snowshoe Rabbit, and of Reddy Fox. The distance between his prints showed that Jumper had been making great bounds such as only a Hare in the hurry of great fright can make. Reddy had seen Jumper before the latter had seen him. He had crept forward crouching close to the ground. Just as he had leaped Jumper had bounded away in the nick of time. It was all written in the snow and Tommy had read it to the others.

"Isn't it exciting?" panted Sue as they hurried forward. "I wonder how it will end."

"I wonder too," said Tommy. "Reddy can run fast, but not fast enough to catch that long-legged dodger just by chasing him, and he knows it. He is too smart to waste his breath and tire himself out in that way. We won't go far before we find that he soon gave up the idea of catching that Hare or else—"

"Else what?" Sammy asked as Tommy failed to finish.

"He worked out some scheme, some smart trick," explained Tommy.

A few minutes later they came to a parting of the two trails. Those of the Hare went straight on. Tommy pointed out that he was in just as much of a hurry as ever.

"The poor thing! I suppose he was scared almost to death," said Sue pityingly.

"He was scared all right, but not so scared as you think. He probably has to run like this for his life at least once every day and probably several times on some days. A fellow can get used to almost anything, even danger. So while he was scared he probably figured that he had escaped so many times he would this time. Anyway he was a long way from being scared to death. Reddy turned off here and beat it off in another direction as you can see. "Tommy pointed to the trail clearly written in the snow.

"He quit and went off about something else," said Sammy.

Tommy shook his head. "I don't read it that way," said he.

"I don't see how you can read it any other way," declared Sammy stubbornly. "The Hare went that way and Reddy Fox went that way, and if that isn't giving up I don't know what would be."

"You've missed something," said Tommy, and grinned.

"What have I missed?' demanded Sammy.

"Look at those tracks we have been following and then look at those tracks of Reddy's where he has gone off by himself. They show that he was running just as hard then as before. What would he do that for, if he had given up? He wouldn't. He would have stopped right here. Then when he did move on he would have walked or trotted and you could have seen it all written in the snow. But what you do see are the tracks of a Fox turning off while running hard, and keeping right on at full speed," replied Tommy.

'Come on!" cried Sue. "Let's finish the story. It gets more exciting all the time. I didn't know before that there could be such interesting stories written in the snow. I've just got to know the end of this one."

"All right," replied Tommy. "Which trail shall we follow?"

Wallace Says Farm Act Will Be 'Improved'

With 76.5 of Farmers For Quotas, Foes Admit Opposition Weakening

By the United Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, asserting that the Nation's farmers overwhelmingly favor New Deal crop control legislation, predicted yesterday that the measure will be strengthened and improved next year in order to be of greater benefit to all agricultural workers.

Wallace based his conclusions on results of crop referenda held among growers of cotton, rice and three types of tobacco.

Although only the cotton growers gave the two-thirds majority necessary to begin operation of marketing quotas, he said the referenda "constitute remarkable indorsement" of AAA programs.

76.5 Per Cent for Quotas

The Secretary's statement was made shortly after the crop reporting board, in its final report of the year, estimated 1938 wheat production at 930,801,000 bushels—the fourth largest crop in American history—and corn at 2,542,238,000 bushels, slightly lower than last year's harvest. The board's estimates, both above average, indicated bumper crops for the second successive year.

Wallace contended that the referenda results, in which he said 76.5 per cent of the 1,587,352 producers of the three crops voted for marketing restrictions, have "proved the absurdity of the charges that the agricultural adjustment act of 1938 imposes a dictatorship upon the farmers."

Growers of rice and flue-cured tobacco rejected marketing quotas in a referendum two weeks ago, at the same time that cotton farmers voted overwhelmingly in favor of sale restrictions. In a poll conducted last week, marketing restrictions were rejected by growers of burley and dark tobaccos.

Votes Weaken Opposition

The Secretary said that on the basis of early returns, 1,216,147 of the 1,587,352 producers taking part in the referenda voted in favor of restrictions.

"Undoubtedly," he said, "many of the farmers who voted against quotas for 1939 in the cotton, tobacco and rice referenda approve other phases of the AAA programs. By their very nature, marketing quotas are the most extreme and controversial phase of the AAA programs. * * *

"I am confident that these principles are sound, that they will be continued and that they will be strengthened and improved so that they may be of greater benefit to farmers."

Nevertheless the entire New Deal farm program faces a stiff fight in the Seventy-sixth Congress, although several foes of present crop control methods have admitted privately that the cotton growers' indorsement of marketing restrictions undoubtedly will weaken opposition arguments.

Station Barring Coughlin Speech Picketed by 1,800

New York, Dec. 19 (AP).—An endless chain of pickets composed, police said, of 1,800 persons, marched yesterday around the block in which radio station WMCA is located. Many carried placards demanding the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin's speeches be carried again by the station.

WMCA barred the Detroit radio priest on November 27 when he failed to submit an advance copy of his speech.

Allen Zoll, president of American Patriots, Inc., which sponsored the picketing, said:

"This is an American protest against the curtailment of free speech. It is not merely a Catholic protest in defense of Father Coughlin, although there are many Catholics in the group."

Harvard Repeats News Scholarships

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 19 (AP).—Harvard last night offered for another year the Lucius W. Nieman scholarships for newspapermen, under which nine editors and reporters already are studying their chosen fields at the university.

The awards, given for the first time this year, provide for a full academic year of study at the same salaries the recipients received from their papers. Applications must be received by March 1, 1939.

A gift of Harvard by Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, widow of Lucius W. Nieman, founder of the Milwaukee Journal, finances the program, designed "to promote and elevate the standards of joaurnalism in the United States and educate persons deemed specially qualified for journalism."

3 Sail 36-Foot Boat From Iowa to Calif.

San Pedro, Calif., Dec. 19 (AP).—Gaunt and weary, the three-man crew of the 36-foot auxiliary ketch Exchange moored their craft in Los Angeles Harbor yesterday, completing a 9,000-mile voyage from Davenport, Iowa, via the Mississippi, inland waterways to Florida, then to the Panama Canal via the West Indies. The voyage was begun October 25, 1937.
